Nixon plans Japan trip despite his ailing leg

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) — President Nixon may visit Japan next month to follow up on his trips to the Mideast and the Soviet Union despite his ailing leg and the congressional impeachment proceedings, White House insiders said Saturday.

No definite date has been set, and a White House spokesman would say only that "his (the President's) travel is not yet set, but he does plan to go to Japan in 1974."

Nixon, who has been resting up after his intensive summit talks in Moscow, stayed out of public view Saturday. Aides said he mixed limited work with relaxation and swimming —on orders from doctors who are trying to reduce the swelling caused by a permanent blood clot in Nixon's left leg.

The President's personal physician, Maj. Gen. Walter Tkach said Nixon risked his life by traveling to the Mideast with the blood clot, since it could have broken free and reached his heart or lungs. Tkach refused Saturday to pinpoint the exact location of the clot or divulge its dimensions, but said it no longer poses a serious danger.

Nixon would be the first President to visit Japan. It is known that he planned to stop there on the way back from Moscow, but the visit was never officially announced and it ultimately was dropped, without explanation, from his schedule.

As Nixon relaxed at his bayside home, his legal defense team worked in Washington to prepare for Monday's Supreme Court test of the President's right to withhold subpoenaed material and a federal grand jury's authority to name him as an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up.

The White House has refused to say whether Nixon would abide by the High Court's rulings and an official said Saturday that the President had not even discussed the case with his attorneys since returning from Moscow.

"The president is maintaining contact with his legal advisers through Gen. Alexander M. Haig and other staff members," reporters were told. "However, he has not talked to any of his lawyers personally."

NAZI PARTY SHOOTING

Thomas R. Dwyer Jr., 20, a marine, is escorted from St. Louis County Hospital Saturday by his girl-friend Peggy after being treated for a gunshot wound suffered during a shooting at the American Nazi Party headquarters in Breckenridge Hills, Mo. Dwyer's father was also wounded.

Ford sniping report false, but additional precautions taken

DALLAS (UPI) — The Dallas Police Department took extra precautions Saturday at Preston Trail Golf Club, where Vice President Gerald Ford had a golf date, despite the fact that a sniping report as Ford arrived in Dallas turned out to be groundless.

A report that a sniper had broken a window of a Department of Public Safety patrol car escorting Ford was later withdrawn and the DPS said a rock or the heat broke the window of the car.

While police would not say precisely what precautions they took at the golf club, they said the erroneous sniping report had caused them to send out extra intelligence men and patrolmen.

Police Capt. John Driscoll, who was near the DPS squad car when the window was broken, said that if it had been a shot it would have had to be "straight on" —at a 45-degree angle to the moving car—and there was no cover for a shot to be fired in a construction site along the freeway.

"We were in the area where the shot would have had to come from within 10 seconds," Driscoll said. "We looked over several pieces of construction equipment and in a construction trailer.

"The door was locked but we looked inside anyway in case a sniper was hiding in there. We didn't find anybody. There was just no place to hide. A projectile of any kind would have had to come from straight on to make that kind of hole."

At the time the window was broken, a police helicopter with a Secret Service man in it was directly overhead. No sign of a sniper was observed from the helicopter.

As soon as the window breaking was reported, another police helicopter flew to the scene. Police in the second helicopter saw no sign of a sniper.

DEATH TRAP FOR BOY?

The sheet-covered body of 4-year-old Ricardo Manon can be seen in this abandoned refrigerator where he was found by Los Angeles police officers Saturday. The boy had been reported missing late Friday and an all-night search was conducted. The refrigerator was two blocks from boy's home.

Leaders face $15,000 fines in garbage strike

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A circuit judge Saturday gave union leaders until Monday to order striking trash collectors back to work or face fines of $15,000-a-day.

At the same time, police voting on a six per cent pay hike reportedly was running overwhelmingly in favor of beginning some sort of job action.

Judge James W. Murphy, after hearing more than three hours of testimony in an unusual Saturday session, found Local 44 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes in contempt of court for ignoring his injunction against the six-day old sanitation workers' walkout.

The judge found three union officials innocent of contempt and refused to levy individual fines. Murphy gave the union until 5 p.m. Monday to comply.

The walkout has left huge piles of decaying garbage, threatening a health hazard.

The local health department said it was unable to cope with the fly and rat problems surrounding the uncollected refuse and warned that there would be a serious "potential for disease" in some areas if the mess wasn't cleaned up by Monday at the latest.

Out on the picket lines, tempers flared once again Saturday as five local union members were arrested on disorderly conduct charges for allegedly blocking the path of trucks and automobiles to an incinerator.

Boy's body found inside refrigerator

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The body of a four-year-old boy, last seen late Friday getting into the car of a man who had bought him candy, was found Saturday inside a refrigerator behind an abandoned house.

Police said there were no signs of violence on the body. The boy, Ricardo Manon, was reported missing late Friday and was the object of a night-long search by police.

Ricardo disappeared from his home about 4:30 p.m. Friday but was not reported missing for five hours.

The body was found two blocks from the child's Wilshire area home. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Xavier Manon.

Fear of rich nations gaining control of U.S. resources told

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House subcommittee expressed fears Saturday that dollar-rich oil producing and other foreign countries might buy control of America's vital national resources and export them.

A report by the subcommittee on foreign economy said that huge sums of money available to foreign investors pose problems of investment in this country which the administration is not confronting.

The report had more questions than recommendations except for urging passage of a proposed foreign investment study act to look further into the problem.

"The future prospect of new direct foreign investment in the United States is unclear," said the report. "Many of the secular factors —size of the U.S. market, desire to secure United States know how and resources, evolution of European multinationals, reduction in the gap for labor costs between the United States and other industrialized nations — should continue to sustain foreign interest in the United States economy.

"On the other hand, the dramatic growth during 1973 may not be repeated because the devaluation of the dollar has been partially reversed and because the stock market may not remain depressed over the long run. Furthermore, the effect of soaring petroleum prices may drastically reduce the foreign exchange available for foreign investment."

Now it's round-up time— for 500 live alligators

CAMERON, La. (UPI) — Wildlife agents are stalking the swamps of coastal Louisiana with flashlights, burlap bags and snares to round up 500 alligators for transfer to Arkansas and Mississippi.

The National Audubon Society, working with conservation agencies in Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi, began the roundup this week. It should be completed by Aug. 15.

"The alligators to be moved will range in length from 3 to 5 ½ feet," said a spokesman for the Audubon Society. "Smaller gators might have more difficulty surviving in their new homes and the larger ones might follow their homing tendency and seek to return to their original habitat."

Alligators were declared an endangered species in America seven years ago, but since then new laws and stronger conservation efforts have sparked a comeback. In Louisiana, gators have become so plentiful that an annual hunting season is opened and the state occasionally offers to relocate some of its surplus reptiles to neighboring areas.

"Mississippi and Arkansas, which in the past have taken Louisiana gators, agreed to accept more," said the Audubon Society. "The game and fish commissions of the two states have selected suitable sites for releasing them, and the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife—which is responsible for the endangered species program—has given its approval.

"Working with lights, wildlife officials will fish out the small gators by hand and will catch the larger ones with snares attached to poles. They'll then place a heavy rubber band around the gator's snout, put it into a wet burlap bag, and mark it to indicate its sex.

Typhoon Gilda hits Japan and Korea; 24 die; 30 lost

TOKYO (UPI) — Typhoon Gilda raced into the Sea of Japan Sunday, leaving behind fatalities, floods, landslides, and snarled traffic and communications in southern Korea and Japan.

Japanese and Korean authorities said 24 persons were killed and 30 others were missing in landslides triggered by downpours generated by Gilda's fringe winds.

With winds of up to 76 miles an hour, the typhoon battered both the Korean southern coast and Japan while it pushed its way through the Korea Strait that separates the two countries.

Japanese police said 13 persons were killed, 19 missing, and six injured in a landslide on Shodoshima island in the Inland Sea Sunday.

In Awajishima island near Kobe, major sea port in western Japan, six persons died in four slides and another was missing, police said. Another death was reported Saturday.

Woman critically injured by cycle

ONTARIO — A 19-year-old woman was critically injured by a motorcycle while crossing Baker Street Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Vivian R. Cuevas reportedly jumped into the path of a motorcycle operated by Ray Pruden of Ontario. She was rushed to San Antonio Hospital in Upland with head injuries and possible internal injuries.

Officer Ron Eoff of the Ontario Police, the investigating officer in the case, said Saturday night that Pruden had not been charged in connection with the accident.

Witnesses reported that Pruden swerved to avoid striking the pedestrian but she jumped into his path, according to Officer Eoff.

Too late, but electronic safeguards set for arsenals

The theft of a large quantity of combat weapons from a California National Guard armory caught federal and state governments in the midst of a crash nationwide program of installing electronic safeguards that have already sharply cut such burglaries.

But almost 1,000 of the 4,333 National Guard arms vaults across the nation still are without electronic alarms of the type being installed at the Compton, Calif., armory when thieves made off with almost 100 M16 automatic rifles, seven machineguns and other weapons over the July 4th holiday, according to Guard officials in Washington, D.C.

The Compton theft was the second this year. In April, four rifles and a pistol were stolen from the Anchorage armory.

Compton Police Detective Arthur Camarillo said the thieves could have been members of a terrorist group such as the Symbionese Liberation Army, or "just good burglars who knew there was a wide open market for firearms."

"We just don't know who was involved," he said. "It wasn't a run of the mill burglary. The thieves knew how to get in and they had the right tools."

A spokesman for the FBI, also investigating because the theft involved government property, said, "There are no suspects and no indication of any group or any organization responsible for the disappearance of the weapons and ammunition."

A Pentagon spokesman admitted that building guards are virtually nonexistant and the armories are frequently unattended, as was the case at Compton.

A spot check of 16 states by United Press International found that under a program to be completed "as soon as possible" in which the federal government pays 75 per cent of the costs, electronic systems were already in operation or were being installed in 14 states.

They were Washington, South Dakota, Arizona, Missouri, Nebraska, Georgia, Oregon, New Mexico, North Carolina, South Carolina, Ohio, Nevada, California and Illinois. The Utah Guard command would not discuss safeguards.

Hawaii Guard Chief of Staff Col. Paul Nakamura said, however, some of the state's 24 armories did not have alarm systems and warned a break-in "could happen" there.

'Extended coverage for certain customers'

Ford Company accused of secret warranties

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Center for Auto Safety, which is affiliated with consumer advocate Ralph Nader, Saturday accused the Ford Motor Co. of maintaining "a secret system of extended warranty coverage potentially affecting millions of owners of Ford cars and trucks."

It asked the Federal Trade Commission to look into the unpublicized warranty extensions on selected components, the second such allegation it has made on auto manufacturers' guarantees. In January, the Center said that General Motors had extended "under-the-table" warranty extensions to some Chevrolet Vega owners because of engine failures.

Ford's Washington public relations office said the Center "is mistaken when it states that Ford Motor Co. secretly extends its warranty coverage for certain customers."

But it said, "to enable its dealers to maintain customer goodwill, the company sometimes will reimburse a dealer for certain repairs after the warranty expires. These are not extensions of the warranty; they are, in fact, totally independent of the warranty."

The Auto Safety Center said that it had obtained two Ford dealer "summary cards" which "detail 14 apparently recurring problems and defects in various Ford and Lincoln-Mercury models and provide the terms for repair or replacement of the faulty components" beyond the life of the usual warranty of 12 months or 12,000 miles.

It said it tried to obtain copies of all such summaries from Ford but was told the information was confidential and "strictly an in-company matter" between the company and its dealers.

"When warranty extensions are kept confidential," a Center spokesman said, "many consumers who might benefit from the manufacturers' programs are excluded. In our experience, only those customers who complain frequently or strenuously to an authorized dealer in a timely manner succeed in learning of the warranty extensions."

The "summary cards" the Center quoted extended basic warranties from 12 to 24 and even 36 months and, in cases, with unlimited mileage, for free replacement of parts and cost of labor—or in some cases a maximum 50 per cent charge for parts and labor. Defects covered included replacement or repair of rusting panels around fuel fillers, valve guide wear, starter drives, air conditioners, power steering, and wood grained mouldings on Lincoln Town cars.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The hint that the CIA is directly involved in domestic espionage keeps coming up at the trial of John D. Ehrlichman and members of the White House "plumbers" for conspiracy in the 1971 Ellsberg break-in.

Each time it comes up, testimony has been presented to knock it down, along with the notion that the CIA has been involved in making psychological profiles and spying on Americans at home.

The CIA is forbidden by law from domestic activities. But former White House Special Counsel Charles W. Colson, who goes to prison Monday for obstruction of justice in the Ellsberg case, and Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., vice chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, have hinted recently the role of the CIA at home is much vaster than many people think.

Ehrlichman, President Nixon's top domestic adviser; G. Gordon Liddy, a former FBI agent employed by the plumbers; Bernard L. Barker and Eugenio Martinez, former CIA operatives at the Bay of Pigs, go into the third week of their conspiracy trial Monday. Ehrlichman is expected to testify this week in his defense.

They are charged with violating the citizens rights of Lewis J. Fielding, a Beverly Hills, Calif., psychiatrist, whose office was burglarized during Labor Day weekend 1971 in a search for damaging information about Ellsberg, who gave newspapers portions of the secret Pentagon Papers on the Vietnam war.

E. Howard Hunt Jr., a former CIA agent attached to the plumbers, testified on June 28 that he went to the agency in advance of the break-in and got outfitted with disguises for a "highly sensitive" White House mission.

Gen. Robert E. Cushman Jr., who was then deputy director of the CIA and now commandant of the Marines, testified Wednesday he subsequently spurned Hunt because "he was getting unreasonable in his requests and not using good judgment."

"In my opinion this tended to draw the agency into the sensitive and forbidden area of operations against Americans and I coould no longer comply with his requests," Cushman said Jan. 10, 1973 in a memo to Ehrlichman that was introduced at the trial.

Prior to the break-in, the plumbers had asked the CIA to produce a psychiatric profile of Ellsberg. Egil Krogh Jr. and David R. Young Jr., codirectors of the special investigative unit, testified they found the profile "superficial, very disappointing."

Assistant Watergate Prosecutor Philip G. Bakes Jr. Friday asked Bernard Malloy, the CIA's chief psychiatrist, whether the agency had ever profiled another American. The psychiatric profiles are usually of foreign leaders or diplomats.

"No, sir," said Malloy, making the exception of "one brief effort" for an American held by a foreign power.

Two cosmonauts 'at home' in orbit

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two Soviet cosmonauts made themselves at home in earth orbit Saturday in their three-roomed Salyut space laboratory.

Ground controllers said the cosmonauts, Col. Pavel Popovich and Lt. Col. Yuri Artyukhin, both 44, have already adapted perfectly to weightlessness and their 20-ton Salyut-3 oribiting laboratory is functioning without a hitch.

They entered the laboratory from their Soyuz-14 spacecraft early Friday.

The Tass news agency said the Salyut consists of a double cylinder and a cone providing three rooms. Although the craft is only a quarter the size of the American Skylab on which three astronauts spent a record 84 days in space, Tass said it is big enough for a separate recreation room.

There Popovich and Artyukhin rest, eat and do gymnastic exercises.

Tass said the laboratory also has a proper floor and ceiling and added this has helped the cosmonauts adapt to weightlessness because "they know which is top and which is bottom."

Tass said the cosmonauts are testing Salyut's engineering systems and its energy supply, which comes from solar panels that lock on the sun regardless of the spaceship's position.

Tribunal rules married cadet violated code

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — A West Point tribunal has ruled that a cadet who broke academy rules by getting married while still in school, violated the honor code by describing his wife as a "friend" on an insurance form, it was disclosed Saturday.

The decision Friday night by the Board of Officers tribunal may result in the expulsion of Cadet Donald M. Boyd, 23, of Lexington, Mass., who was married secretly in December, 1972.

Academy rules state, "Any cadet who is married prior to graduation shall be separated from the academy."

A similar regulation at the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., was struck down by a recent decision in Brooklyn federal court.

West Point's Public Affairs Officer, Col. Thomas Garigan, said the tribunal ruled that Boyd had "actively misrepresented and falsified...a government document."

Garigan said the document in question was his military insurance document, known as the Standard Governmental Life Insurance form.

Boyd reportedly named his wife, the former Joanne Moon, as benificiary of the insurance policy but identified her as his "friend."

A final decision on whether Boyd will graduate could take weeks because the board's findings must first be reviewed by the academy's superintendant, Lt. Gen. William Knowlton, and Secretary of the Army Howard H. Calloway.

Boyd was barred from graduation June 5 after Knowlton received an anonymous letter informing him that Boyd was married. Boyd subsequently admitted that not only was he married, but also had a daughter named Christin.

Two oil drum caskets found in building of slain convict

CHICAGO (UPI) — A building owned by an ex-convict found slain last winter turned out Saturday to contain the oil drum caskets of two men.

John McGee, 42, who a month ago began leasing the Korner Sandwich Shop from the widow of Sam Rantis, 43, of Elmwood Park, called police because of odors from two sealed drums in a storage area behind the shop. Police found a decomposed body in each drum.

Rantis, who was released from the U.S. penitentiary at Sandstone, Minn., in 1972 after serving 11 months on counterfeit charges, was found dead of stab wounds in the trunk of his wife's car at O'Hare International Airport Feb. 24. His wife had reported him missing Dec. 8. Police discovered the body only after they noticed the car license plates were outdated.

One homicide detective said the two men found dead Saturday may have been victims of a crime syndicate. No one has been arrested for Rantis' murder or the apparent murders of the persons found in the oil drums.

Seven arrested in marijuana raid

POMONA — Seven persons, including three married couples, were arrested by police for possession of marijuana when officers broke up a "pot party" at a Pomona residence.

Those booked were Thomas Lemmon, 22, his wife Pamela, 19, both of 2617 Stanford St., where the "party" was held, Richard Boyer, 23, Laurel Boyer, 21, both of Fontana, Russell Freightner, 19, Veronica Freightner, 18, both of Ontario and Victor Hernandez of Ontario.

Walnut trustees to hold session

WALNUT — Trustees of the Walnut School District will hold their annual organizational meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Walnut High School choral room.

Election of president, vice president and clerk of the board for 1974-75 will be considered at the meeting. A district representatve also will be named to the county committee on school district organization.

Trustees also will consider approval of a publication budget for next year. A $6.7-million tentative budget was approved lsst month.

Kissinger in Germany after session with Pope

MUNICH (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger flew from Italy to Germany Saturday on his briefing tour of Western allies and U.S. officials said he had secured the support of Pope Paul VI for President Nixon's Moscow summit talks.

Kissinger spent 70 minutes with the Pope in the Vatican Saturday morning before flying to Munich for a combination of work and relaxation.

In Germany, Kissinger joined Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher for a working lunch at a village inn. They continued the briefing on the Moscow summit that began when they met in Duesseldorf earlier this week.

After lunch, they drove to Munich to watch Brazil play Poland to determine third place in the world soccer championship.

Senior U.S. officials on Kissinger's plane said the Secretary and Pope Paul talked about Jerusalem and the Moscow summit.

Kissinger found the Pope very supportive and very positive toward President Nixon's summit policy, the officials said.

The Pope handed Kissinger a written memorandum concerning the status of Jerusalem, the officials said. Kissinger lacked time to read it before meeting Genscher in Germany, but hoped to study it over the weekend.

The Pope sent a message of warm personal greetings to President Nixon, the official added.

The Vatican has called for a special status for Jerusalem in any settlement of the Arab-Israeli dispute.

Violence spreads in Bangkok

BANGKOK (UPI) — Violence spread Saturday night from Bangkok's Chinese district. One person was reported killed and a railway police officer wounded in a clash which raised the four-day death toll to 25.

The incident occurred at the city's main railway station, situated in a district adjoining the Chinese sector that has been the scene of shooting and clashes since Wednesday night.

Snipers in a nearby hotel fired on the police officer, wounding him and killing a bystander. About 200 policemen converged on the hotel but a search of the building produced no results. A contingent of about 40 men was left to guard the area.

It was the first shooting incident since violence in the Chinese district tapered off Friday night.

"We can't predict what the developments are going to be," Deputy Interior Minister Lt. Gen. Chumphol Lohachala told newsmen at the Plabplachai police station, "but overall the situation seems to have improved."

Police patrolled deserted streets inside Chinatown hours after cordoning off the neighborhood and ordering throngs of residents out in the daylight hours to return to their homes.

Chumphol said that he met with leaders of Chinese associations during the day and that they had pledged their help in defusing the volatile situa-

Black farmers in South disappearing rapidly

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — The black farm owner in the South is disappearing at "an amazingly rapid pace," a Duke University researcher said Saturday.

Dr. Lester Salamon, assistant professor of political science and a member of the Duke Institute of Policy Sciences and Public Affairs, said if the current trend continues there may be no black farmers left by the end of the century.

His comments were based on a study which showed blacks represent about 6.3 per cent of the landowners in the South and control 2 per cent of the farmland in the region but have been losing their land at the rate of 330,000 acres a year since 1954.

The study covered 14 Southern states—the Old Confederacy plus Missouri, Kentucky and West Virginia. As of 1969, the latest year complete figures were available, there were 67,000 black landowners, with more than half their holdings concentrated in Alabama, Mississippi and the two Carolinas.

Salamon said as small farmers are forced out by economic and other pressures there has been a parallel rise in the average acreage of black-owned farms. While these farms appear stronger economically, they may not be able to survive in the long haul. Blacks controlled 5.6 million acres valued at $1 billion in 1969.

On a per acre basis, black farmers earn more profits but invest in more equipment than whites, Salamon said, and the average black-owned acre supports more debt than the average white-owned acre.

He listed four major reasons for the decline in black farm ownership: Blacks often control marginal land that becomes worn out through intense cultivation; they sometimes cannot cope with the large debts incurred for equipment; the younger generation of blacks is turning away from the land for the cities, and title disputes and unscrupulous speculators cause a flow of land from blacks to others.

The situation, Salamon said, presents at once "a crisis and an opportunity" for Southern blacks. He said equity capital represented by remaining black-owned land could be used as collateral for a variety of minority-development ventures as the South undergoes urbanization.

Selling odds and ends

What to do with those remnants of spring housecleaning, the items that have outlied their usefulness or the odds and ends not needed after moving to a new house? To solve their problems, many valley residents hold garage salss, recycling their unwanted items to others who may have a use for them.

Housecleaning resulted in garage sales at the Vic Mascho home, 605 Gayville Drive, Claremont, left, and the Eric Seibert home, 3217 N. Towne Ave., Claremont.

An abundance of garage, yard and rummage sales are announced in newspapers and advertising papers each day.

Newcomer to head education committee

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Schools chief Wilson Riles has announced appointment of a blue ribbon citizens committee to study "revitalization" of California junior and senior high schools.

"The chrge of this group will be to make the bridge between childhood and adulthood an exciting and enriching one," the superintendent of public instruction said.

He appointed Leland Newcomer, president of La Verne College, to chair the 36-member "Commission for the Reform of Intermediate and secondary Education."

Newcomer has been president of the La Verne school since 1968 and is noted for his innovative approaches to the problems of education.

Three years ago, Riles appointed a similar commission whose work, in part, resulted in the state's new early childhood education program.

Riles said the "revitalization" of grades seven through 12 was the "top priority" of his second term.

Pomona Y sets swim lessons

POMONA — Adult swim lessons will be offered by the Pomona Valley YMCA beginning Monday.

A class for both men and women will be held on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. A class for women only will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m.

Each class runs for a period of five weeks. Cost is $1 for YMCA members and $10 for non-members.

For information, persons may call 623-6433.

Manning hits nudity

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Cardinal Timothy Manning has attacked the city's proposed ordinance to set aside areas for public nudity as "an assault on our sense of decency."

Manning, a spiritual leader of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese in Los Angeles, said the measure, which still awaits final approval, is "another instance of the permissiveness that is corroding our culture and victimizing our young people."

FBI, police follow up leads

COMPTON, Calif. (UPI) — The FBI and police staked out a house in San Pedro near here early Saturday in a continuing investigation of the theft of an arsenal of weapons stolen from a National Guard Armory.

No information was given about the stakeout, which lasted for several hours, but officers indicated it was apparently a follow up to one of many leads phoned in by citizens.

The location of the stakeout, in the San Pedro harbor area of Los Angeles, was not disclosed. It was called off at midmorning.

The weapons cache, stolen during the July 4th holiday, included nearly 100 rifles, 7 machineguns, 8 grenade launchers, 156 smoke and gas grenades, a .45 caliber automatic pistol, 75 gas masks and more than 4,300 rounds of ammunition.

Police said all of the weapons, except the grenade launchers, were useless because the firing pins and bolts had been removed.

There was official speculation that a terrorist group took the weapons, but officers said it also could be "just good burglars who knew there was a wide open market for firearms."

Thieves broke down two doors and used a power drill to break into a vault to get the guns.

The armory had been in the process of having a silent alarm system installed, but work on it was not completed.

The Compton armory, a one-story stucco building surrounded by a chain-link fence, was not guarded at the time of the burglary.

National Guard officials estimated loss at the armory at $22,687 but said blackmarket sale of the weapons could amount to more than $100,000.

While the rifles and machine guns were not operable, officials said the bolt assembly of the civilian AR15 rifle could be fitted without modification to the stolen M16 rifles.

The FBI joined in the search for the missing weapons because federal property, the guns and ammunition, was involved.

30 teenagers to participate in youth camp

SAN DIMAS — Thirty teenagers from the Pomona and San Gabriel valleys will take part in an eight-week Youth Conservation Corps Program beginning Monday at Tanbark Flat in Angeles National Forest six miles north of here.

"The camp will provide the youth with opportunities for learning about the management, meaning use and protection of our enviornment and natural resources," said William T. Dresser, forest supervisor.

The youths range from 15 to 18 years of age. They will live and work out of the camp Monday through Friday.

The camp is sponsored jointly by the U.S. departments of Agriculture and Interior, with the participation of the Los Angeles County forester and fire warden, the Los Angeles County Fire Department, California Department of Fish and Game, the East San Gabriel Regional Occupational Program and the Los Angeles County Supt. of Schools.

16 students selected for Washington visit

WASHINGTON — Sixteen students have been selected to visit Washington, D.C., this summer in a Congressional Scholarship program sponsored by Rep. Victor Veysey, R-43rd Dist.

These high school students will live for eight days with Veysey and his wife in the Virginia home and attend daily sessions of both the House of Representative and the Senate.

Funds for the students are provided by local businessmen. The students are divided into four groups, with the first two already completing their tours. The remaining groups will depart for Washington on Sunday and July 21. They are:

Group 4 — Tinamarie Galindo, Imperial, Heather Fauth, Riverside, Joe Heryberg, Riverside and Paul Cheverton, Claremont.

Students chosen must have been in the top 20 per cent of their class, be interested in government and willing to share their experiences with government classes and service clubs.

Indian Hill problems set for consideration

CLAREMONT — Seven recommendations by Public Works Director Paul Cook towards alleviating traffic problems on Indian Hill Boulevard will be considered by the city Traffic Safety Committee at its 7:30 p.m. meeting Monday in the City Council chambers.

Residents living in the area between Bonita Avenue and Eighth Street filled the chambers at the public hearing held last month by the committee on the Indian Hill-Harrison Avenue traffic problem.

Cook has suggested to the committee that "the entire population of Claremont should be consulted including those people who depend on the street for access and exposure or simply enjoy the beauty of it."

Cook has recommended against four-way stop signs at Indian Hill and Harrison Avenue because of the unbalanced amount of traffic. About 15,000 vehicles a day use Indian Hill Boulevard, while only 1,500 go east and west on Harrison Avenue.

Cook recommends that a traffic signal be installed at that intersection, but not in the immediate future.

Ontario issued 103 construction permits in June

ONTARIO — Construction of a junior high school and a new market topped new building projects here last month.

City officials reported issuing 103 building permits for projects having a combined valuation of $2.8 million.

This included a new main structure at Vina Danks Junior High School, 318 W. J St. School officials plan to demolish the existing main building which fails to meet state earthquake requirements and replace it with a 52,936 square foot structure. The cost is $2,036,438.

The new building will contain administration offices, library, multi-purpose room, 17 regular classrooms, seven special classrooms, reading laboratory, remedial room, storage and utility areas.

In a second project, the Santa Anita Development Corp. is an Alpha Beta market at 1850 S. Euclid Ave. The 23,800-square-foot structure is valued at $450,200.

Two smaller buildings are planned later in making this a small shopping center, said city officials.

Permits were also issued for three industrial buildings. These include an office structure at 840 S. Cucamonga Ave., $25,000; industrial structure at 550 W. State St., $20,000; and office at 1250 Ontario Blvd., $9,000.

Officials noted a marked decline in home construction as permits were issued for only two houses valued at $57,538.

For the first six months this year, officials had issued permits for 173 single family homes valued at $4.4 million.

Residents, however, continued to spruce up their existing homes as 59 permits were issued for dwelling alterations at a cost of $79,687.

Other permits and valuations for June include:

Alterations to commercial and industrial buildings, seven, $66,724; fire sprinklers for the Salem Christian Home for the Handicapped, $11,000; and a city well building, $4,000.

The June activity brought the six month totals to 573 permits and a $12 million valuation.

HARRY H. HASKELL of Redlands has been appointed new manager of the Bank of America's branch office in east Pomona. He succeeds Lee Baker who joined the regional staff. Haskell is a member of the Pomona Chamber of Commerce and the Montclair Kiwanis Club. He and his wife, Carol, have three children.

JOSEPH M. BRIGGS of Claremont has been appointed works accounting manager for the Kaiser Steel Corp.'s plant in Fontana. He had previously served as manager for cost accounting and analysis. He and his wife, Mary, have two children.

Schools ask end of DST

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Board of Education, after trying the year-round Daylight Saving Time schedule for six months, no longer wants any part of it.

In a resolution to the state legislature and Congress recently, the board asked for a return to Pacific Standard Time during the fall.

The resolution said because of DST, initiated as an energy-saving measure last January, many students go to school in the dark and it has created inconveniences and scheduling problems for teachers, school staffs and parents.

Stamp collecting

Plate blocks and FDCs are interesting areas

By HUBBARD KEAVY
AND ERNIE BENNETT
PART VI—PLATE BLOCKS—
FIRST DAY COVERS

(EDITOR'S NOTE: How do you start a stamp collection? The answer to that seemingly simple question is multifaceted. Besides, there are nearly 200,000 varieties of stamps, and no one could possibly collect them all. Many books have been written on the subject, but too often they are technical and the would-be collector is discouraged before he really gets started.

How to start collecting stamps is a 10-part series directed at helping the beginner join the millirons who now enjoy stamp collecting.

Plate blocks and FDCS are interesting areas of collecting and they are the topics of this sixth part.)

Plate blocks, as you know, are the four (or more) stamps in the corner of a sheet, or "pane," that contain the plate number.

They are found in four positions, since the sheet you purchase at the post office is one fourth of that originally run through the press at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and which has the same number in each corner.

A "matched set" of plate blocks (the four positions) will be all of the same number.

Don't expect to find a matched set at one post office. The method of distribtuion usually puts no more than one position in the smaller post offices. And since the printing of any recent commemorative stamp will have from four to twelve consecutive numbers during the course of the run, the search is compounded.

The collector must hustle around to neighboring post offices for the different positions, and is extremely lucky if he can find matching numbers.

Plate blocks make an attractive album, and looseleaf pages are produced by several publishers. They can be kept up-to-date with the addition of new pages at the end of each year.

Many collectors limit their plate blocks to commemorative stamps. These relate to events, themes and people of our history. The landing of the Pilgrims, the Declaration of Independence, Lincoln's Gettysburg address, the Oregon Trail, the gold rush, the Pony Express, and hundreds of others.

Recently, interest has risen in first day covers, or FDCSs.

A "cover" is an envelope or post card with a stamp and cancellation showing that it has been through the mails. A first day cover is one which carries, in addition to the postmark, the slogan "First Day of Issue."

Each new issue is first sold at a designated city one day before being available at other post offices. All mail with the new stamps gets the first day cancellation only in that one city.

First day covers can be obtained by mailing self-addressed envelopes and the cost of the necessary stamps to the postmaster of the designated city well in advance of the first day date.

Colorful envelopes bearing a "cachet" or design relating to the stamp are available from various sources, but a plain envelope is all that is really necessary.

A third, and somewhat related area, is that of souvenir cards. Printed on heavy stock, usually 8½x10½ inches, they contain reproductions of important stamps, along with some descriptive material.

by Bernice Bede Osol

For Sunday, July 7

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful if participating in some form of strenuous sport. You might push yourself beyond your endurance and face aches and pains tomorrow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you take to heart the remarks of one who envies your accomplsihments it will only anger you needlsssly and spoil your day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Remember: A discussion with friends isn't the forum at the United Nations. Neither your views nor theirs will resolve international issues.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's sensible to protect what we feel is ours but sometimes we can be overly-possessive and too concerned that others will take advantage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're apt to be a shade too stubborn for your own good. If the position you take is unyielding, don't expect more from another.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Normally you're not the least bit hesitant about being of service to pals if possible. However, today you'll let the other guy know when he's a nuisance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't try to mix friends who have differing points of view. You'll wind up playing referee to a couple of hotheads.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Bite your tongue so you won't reply in anger when someone who likes to call the shots for everybody instructs you on family management.

Belgian near deciphering Mayan script

MECHELEN, Belgium (UPI) — A Belgian researcher believes he is on the brink of deciphering the Mayan language, a script that has puzzled archaeologists for over 100 years.

Working by himself, Antoon Vollemaere has wrestled with Mayan glyphs for almost 10 years.

"Several times it has been announced that the Maya code has been deciphered," he said in a recent interview. "People are suspicious. But we can say it is now virtually deciphered. We have the most important parts. In two years it should be done entirely."

The Mayan civilization, spreading over Southern Mexico and much of Central America, was perhaps the greatest—and certainly the most durable—of the Precolumbian cultures.

Mayan astronomers charted the stars and devised a calendar more accurate than the Gregorian system we use today. The Mayans studied the medicinal properties of plants and produced pain-killing drugs.

They created a complex agricultural society centered around carefully laid out cities. At their peak, the Mayas developed an architecture rivaling in concept and scale that of ancient Egypt.

But little is known of the history or day-to-day life of the Mayas. Their culture dates from at least 3606 B.C., the year Vollemaere believes is the zero point on the Mayan calendar, to 1640, well after the arrival of the Spanish conquistadores in Mexico.

With the Spaniards came the missionaries, who set about destroying all vestiges of the Mayas' pagan religion, including what must have been thousands of priests' manuscripts.

"The first thing the missionaries did was to burn all the manuscripts and wreck all the idols," Vollemaere said. "They replaced (Mayan writing) with the Latin writing system. They did the job very well because we have only three writing scripts remaining."

It was with copies of the three surviving codices or ancient manuscripts, first brought to public attention in 1839, that Vollemaere, 44, set out to crack the Mayan script.

"In 1965, I began studying the methods of deciphering hieroglyphics," he said. "In 1966, I came across my first book on the Mayas. I said, 'Why don't I study this, rather than the Egyptian writing system, which is so well known?'"

Vollemaere's Mayan expertise blossomed. He developed several technical papers, made field trips to Yucatan and Central America, and finally, on the strength of his published works, was admitted to the Sorbonne in Paris as a doctoral student, though he had never attended a university before. His doctorate in Latin American studies with emphasis on Mayan paleology was the first ever awarded by the French university.

From his rearch, Vollemaere concluded the Mayan script had evolved almost entirely to a phonetic, or syllabic and alphabetic system of writing, like most present-day languages. Because its evolution was stopped by the Spanish conquest it retains vestiges of picture writing and other characteristics of early scripts.

Vollemaere also concluded the Mayas had discovered verb conjugation, and the various suffixes in the script gave it a high degree of expressive precision. He found Mayan writing can be reduced to a few dozen basic elements on which thousands of different characters are built.

The three Mayan codices contain no less than 10,361 hieroglyphs.

"When we decipher the three manuscripts, we won't have too much new material," Vollemaere said. "But the important thing is to know the script. After that comes the interesting part. That is to apply what we know to the Mayan stellae and monuments. If we can read these, then we can know the history as the Maya recorded it."

San Dimas mansion ruined by vandals

ONCE STATELY MANSION

From a distance the old mansion at 101 E. Foothill Blvd., doesn't show the wear and tear from vandals who have all but destroyed the interior of the once fine old house in San Dimas.

Council to determine fate of old building

By LENORE WALLACE
P-B Staff Writer

SAN DIMAS — The house could be an appropriate setting for a Gone With the Wind type movie with its pillered entry, red tile roof and the stately 100-year-old oak tree that dominates the front yard.

The old mansion at 101 E. Foothill Blvd. is hidden from view from traffic on the busy street about 600 feet away by the remaining trees that were once part of one of the finer citrus ranches in the valley.

The house has seen hard times of late. The gardens, lawns and tennis courts are weed filled and the house itself is a shambles. All of the 45 windows have been broken with glass scattered throughout the interior of the structure.

Not one room in the house has escaped the hammering and hacking of the vandals who have ravaged the once fine old house.

The way city officials in San Dimas explain what has happened to the house is that problems all started when the house was used for a haunted house two years ago by a church organization. The vandalism on the vacant house started shortly afterward.

Richard Kumer, city building superintendent, is one city official who has visited the house in recent months to investigate charges that it is a public nuisance. Kumer is dismayed over what has happened to the house which he now feels is "beyond repair."

The owners of the house, Apartment Management Association of Los Angeles, boarded up the house but vandals ripped off the boards even on the upstairs windows. Vandals have torn the red tile off the roof and thrown it inside the house and in the yard.

The stained glass and mirror doors on the french windows that separated the formal dining room from the spacious living room were smashed several months ago and vandals gutted an elevator that went from the first floor to a second floor bedroom.

The house was built in the early 1920s by Fred Nusbickle who came from Boston to become a rancher.

Carruthers went to school with one of the Nusbickle boys. He also worked with the smudging crews at the ranch during the winter months.

"I can remember going into the big kitchen and having hot chocolate and snacks, waiting for the temperatures to drop outside and then we would light the smudge pots," Carruthers said.

He and other long time residents of the community are saddened by what vandals have done to the mansion. He remembers the good times there, the spacious rooms that offered a view of the valley.

Carruthers said the elevator was added by the owner in later years when he developed a heart problem and couldn't climb the stairs. The stairs still give access to the upper floor but the bannister has been ripped off. All of the plumbing fixtures in the two bathrooms upstairs were ripped from the alls and thrown down the stairs.

The house was sold in the mid 50s and has had various tenants since that time but has been vacant the past two years after a problem developed over the water supply to the property.

Kumer has reported to the City Council that he considers the house a dangerous building in its present state because it is open to the public.

A recent visitor opened a kitchen door and a bird flew out.

The Los Angeles County Health Department has notified the owner that the property has no portable water supply and is now unfit for human habitation. Likewise the county fire department says the structure is a potential fire hazard.

The City Council will discuss what to do with the house at a public hearing Monday night. According to Atty. Norman Oliver, the city can demand that the structure be demolished.

HOUSE WRECKERS

An upstairs bedroom of the San Dimas house has large portions of the interior walls torn away by vandals. The house has two fireplaces, two patios and a solarium with no glass in windows.

WORK OF VANDALS

San Dimas building superintendent Richard Kumer looks at some of the debris created by vandals in a house in San Dimas. Kumer feels the house is now beyond repair.

ACTION LINE

To ask help in solving problems with which you have been unsuccessful, write to Action Line, The Progress-Bulletin, P. O. Box 2708, Pomona, Calif. 91766. Sign your full name, address and phone number and include copies (not the original) of receipts or other documentation possible. If your letter is published, only your initials will be used.

Complaints finally get abandoned yard cleared

We live next door to one of the hundreds of abandoned houses in the valley. This one is owned by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Weeds in the front and back yards of this house are three feet high.

During the past 4½ months we and other neighbors have called the fire marshal's office, weed abatement office and West America Corp., which, according to an article in the Progress-Bulletin, has been designated as area manager broker for houses owned by HUD.

It doesn't seem quite fair that people who are still living in Pomona and trying to keep their homes presentable should be subjected to such intolerable conditions as exist next door to us.

Please see if you can get some action and have the weeds removed.—Mrs. J.H., Pomona.

When we got your letter we contacted Maggie O'Donnell, housing coordinator for Pomona's Department of Community Development.

She had already referred your problem to West America Corp. When she heard from us, she did so again.

She was told that the matter would be taken care of that day or the next. The following day an inspector looked at the place and reported that the yard had been cleaned and weeds mowed.

You told us the job wasn't quite to your satisfaction, that you swept the walk and carried away some bags of weeds. Nevertheless, you were grateful.

Several weeks ago you published the firm names and addresses of places to contact regarding old phonograph records. Would you please print them again? — K. B., Pomona.

We only printed the firm names before but here they are with the addresses:

Music Den, 226 W. Ninth St., Los Angeles; Music Man Murray, 5516 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles; Cosmopolitan Book Shop, 7007 Melrose Ave., Los Angeles; Friday Music Co., 806 W. Eighth St., Los Angeles, and Zaad, 910 Pico Blvd., Santa Monica.

You didn't say whether you wanted to buy or sell old records. If you want to obtain them, Bruce Majeska of 15146 Rolling Ridge Drive, Chino, is sales representative for a phonograph record importing company and may be able to help get rare jazz records from Europe.

ANOTHER GOOD GUY

I would like you to hear about another company that seems to pay attention to customers.

Last Christmas I bought a Polaroid camera for my mother. We later found out that an improved focusing option was available.

I wrote to the Polaroid Service Center in El Segundo. Two weeks later we were advised by phone to send the camera in for the addition.

Since we had disposed of the original shipping container, the firm sent one. Lo and behold, there was $1.25 return postage enclosed!

When the camera was modified, we also received a new box of film. For all this there was no charge whatsovever.

We have been satisfied with the camera and almost look forward to some trouble with it so we can avail ourselves of this service again.—G.D., Pomona

Plans for Pomona

Resident workshops spur many proposals

POMONA — How about landscaped median strips along Pomona's main boulevards? Or installing monument entrance signs to greet motorists entering the city?

And building four apartment towers near the Pomona Mall to increase business activity within the commercial area?

These are but a few of the suggestions residents have made during a series of workshops being conducted by the city as a preliminary step in updating the city's general plan.

Sessions have been held the past three months in the old post office building at 400 S. Thomas St. Participants have produced a set of neighborhood and citywide plans embodied in a set of basic policies and goals.

They will hold their next sessions Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, 7 to 10 p.m., to set priorities and discuss programs of achieving these.

During the planning sessions, several members discussed building a football stadium and convention center complex and also neighborhood centers for teen meeting places.

There was also discussion on the need of a community center to accommodate larger functions.

Many workshop members expressed a preference of single family homes over apartment houses to keep a low density profile. Some residents in south Pomona said apartments there didn't represent the present lifestyle.

They also proposed a greater joint use of school facilities for community recreation programs. This included swimming pools and tennis courts at various schools.

Residents expressed concern over Pomona continuing to represent the hub of Pomona Valley. Several said the city is losing that role.

Regarding the landscape medians, workshop members said these could be located along Foothill and Mission boulevards and Garey, Towne and White avenues.

They also proposed "beautiful" signs at the city's main entrances, such as Indian Hill Boulevard south of the San Bernardino Freeway. These signs would be surrounded by landscaped areas.

City officials said the workshops have proven successful in getting citizen opinion needed to revise the general plan. This plan, they explained, is the basic document to guide the city's development in future years.

"The importance of the general plan in directing the future of Pomona can't be over emphasized," said Sanford Sorensen, city planned, "And it is for this reason we are asking citizens to come out and tell us what they want their city to be."

The workshop is a new approach for developing general plans since residents in most communities are presented with a finished product and asked to give approval, he added.

Participants include a wide spectrum of citizens such as housewives, bankers, teachers, clergy, plumbers, Realtors, senior citizens, merchants and city officials.

"They are given a chance to get involved and contribute their ideas in the true spirit of the old town hall meetings where everyone is able to be heard," said Sorensen.

Many of the workshops have been attended by city councilmen and members of the Planning Commission. The workshops are led by Lawrence Halprin & Associates, a San Francisco urban design firm.

Persons wanting more information may phone the workshop "hotline" at 620-2195.

SAN DIMAS — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas will attend a reception July 13 given for Jim Lloyd, Democratic nominee in the 35th Congressional District.

The reception will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. at the home of Councilman and Mrs. Marvin Ersher, 1312 Paseo Alamos. A donation of $5 per person is requested.

Organizers said the event is designed to dramatize an "unpublicized $500 per couple reception" featuring Vice President Gerald Ford who will be guest at a program being held for Rep. Victor Veysey, the Republican nominee in the 35th district.

Bentsen, chairman of the Senate's public works subcommittee on roads, is also chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee.

Opinion

Perhaps a moral quarantine needed

Ominous rumblings again are heard in the Middle East—both the actual explosions of Israeli bombs on Palestinian guerrilla and refugee camps in Lebanon in retaliation for continued terrorist attacks on Israel and renewed Arab threats of war, now with nuclear overtones.

Claiming that Israel has developed a stockpile of tactical nuclear weapons, Cairo newspapers have warned that the next war with Israel will be an atomic one.

"The Arab people's invasion of the nuclear club is no longer an impossibility," says the newspaper Al Akhbar.

"Nuclear weapons are a matter of time," predicted the leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization's delegation to a conference of foreign ministers from 35 Moslem countries in Kuala Lampur, Malaysia. The conference endorsed "jihad"—holy war—against Israel.

The Arabs, of course, are famous for their big talk. As they demonstrated last October, however, if ignored long enough they eventually put their military might where their mouths are.

These threats of nuclear war are especially distressing coming so soon after President Nixon' s visit to the Middle East and his promise to sell nuclear fuel and technology to both Egypt and Israel, even though we are assured that elaborate safeguards would prevent nuclear materials from being diverted to military use.

The paradox is that nuclear power could be of incalculable benefit to all inhabitants of the Middle East. Just a few large nuclear plants could convert tremendous quantities of seawater into fresh to irrigate the barren desert between Israel and Egypt and make it capable of supporting the entire Palestinian refugee population.

Such an idea was proposed by ex-President Eisenhower after the 1967 war, but nothing ever came of it.

The Arab threats are not to be taken lightly. Until such time as the leaders of the Arab nations demonstrate that they are responsible men, until they take steps to curb the terrorists and until they sit down with the Israelis to work out an equitable solution to the refugee problem, the community of nations, for its own protection, should throw a moral quarantine around this festering area of the world.

No place for a trial

"This is the trial of the century and they (the Democrats) are trying to cut it off by July 15. What kind of trial is it when you tell the defense lawyer what witnesses he can call and what witnesses he can't call?"

So protested Rep. Joseph Marazite, (R.N.J.) as the House Judiciary Committee voted to limit its final impeachment hearings to five witnesses. Republicans on the committee had wanted 13.

This insistence by Republicans that impeachable conduct by the President must be demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt by the Judiciary Committee is one of the reasons the committee has been so long performing its function. That function is by no means to conduct the "trial" of the President but to recommend or not recommend that the House of Representatives adopt articles of impeachment. The Constitution provides that the trial of an impeached president take place in the Senate.

To insist that the President's guilt must be proven conclusively before he can be impeached, to demand what amounts almost to his full-scale trial in the Judiciary Committee, is not only a misreading of the Constitution. As much as any of the recent unfavorable leaks from the committee, it could actually prejudice Mr. Nixon's chances for a fair trial if the issue does, indeed, go as far as the Senate.

Risky jobs

Too many people these days are finding jobs difficult to keep. In marginal cases, considering the employment situation, one mistake and you're out. Consider, however, those who have jobs in which one mistake could mean you're dead.

A survey of unusually dangerous jobs, made by Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., turns up some interesting statistics as reported for the Wall Street Journal. For an example: less than 300 aerial performers remain active, three having died in the 1960s. Last year nine of the nation's 4,000 pro motorcycle racers were killed. Four of some 200 active Navy frogmen have died since 1970.

Abalone divers, of whom there are about 170 licensed for professional work, have suffered an average of two deaths a year. In the high risk employment field of sponge diving fewer than 25 still are active, although technological advances in artificial sponge manufacturing have played a large part in cutting the field.

Above water, there is about one fatal fall a year among some 100 bricklayers and masons who work on smokestacks more than 50 feet in height.

Remembering the constitution

WASHINGTON — No other nation has been as successful as the United States in maintaining a free society. The bulwark of American freedom is the Constitution, which was carefully written to protect the people from the government.

But President Nixon and the people he brought into the White House, in pursuit of their political goals, have exceeded the limits of the law. They have claimed the right to violate fundamental freedoms.

The revelations have rocked the nation, confused the populance and divided the electorate. The Founding Fathers believed that the people of this country had both the strength of purpose and the nobility of spirit to make government both responsive and responsible.

It falls upon the people, therefore, to end the abuses of power that threaten their freedom. For power corrupts not only those who abuse it but whole nations as well when they tolerate the abuse.

As their guide, the people must turn to the Constitution, which is the source of their freedom. They must hold their elected leaders strictly to the provisions of the Constitution. For if small violations are tolerated, these become precedents for great violations.

We called attention last April, for example, to the constitutional restrictions on the President's pay He is entitled to compensation for his services, according to the Constitution, but he "shall not receive . . . any other emolument from the United States."

Our constitutional footnote spurred the House Judiciary Committee into taking a closer look at President Nixon's home improvements. Two staff members, James Reun and Thomas Payne, interviewed several California contractors about their work on the presidential compound.

They have confirmed our reports, going back to Oct. 3, 1972, that the President has spent the taxpayers' money to enhance his private property. He finally accepted the finding of the Internal Revenue Service that nearly $100,000 worth of government-paid home improvements should be declared as personal income.

Thus by official IRS ruling which the President doesn't contest, he has received emoluments from the United States in addition to his regular salary. This would appear to violate the Constitution.

We have also questioned whether government officials, who accept extravagant vacations at the expense of foreign governments, have trespassed on the Constitution. For a constitutional caveut clearly outlaws any "emolument . . . of any kind whatever from any King, Prince, or foreign state."

We reported Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., his wife, his daughter and two aides whirled through five nations in three weeks. He soaked the American taxpayers for his own travel bills and drew the legal limit of $75 per day in U.S. counterpart funds. But virtually all his other expenses were covered by his foreign hosts. From Iran to Ceylon, the governments picked up his local hotel and travel bills.

Capitol Hill's premier junketeer, Rep. Richard Hanna, D-Calif., regularly explores the exotic corners of the globe. He gallivanted around the Far East last January, he admitted to us, "as a guest of the Pertamina Oil Company," which happens to be Indonesia's national oil firm.

Last April, a dozen congressional staff members flew to Taiwan for a week's vacation financed by the Chiang Kai-shek government. South Vietnam has also invited congressional employes on all-expenses-paid trips. Eight staff members traveled free to Saigon recently, for example, to view "present realities" in Southeast Asia.

At the request of Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., the House Ethics Committee has now put out an "advisory opinion" on the subject of traveling at the expense of foreign governments. An aide to Kemp had been offered a free trip and the congressman wanted to check on its legality.

The House Ethics Committee rarely issues an opinion, much less one that is candid and clear. But this time, the committee was quite succint: "Acceptance of travel or living expenses in specie or in kind by a member or employe of the House of Representatives from any foreign government, official or representative thereof is . . . prohibited."

The 1966 Foreign Gifts and Decorations Act, which seeks to implement the constitutional restriction, specifically prohibits government officials from accepting valuable gifts from foreign governments. The gifts are supposed to be turned into the State Department.

We reported last February 15 that the First Family's jeweler kept thick books of the Nixon jewelry, "listing the gems of Tricia and Rose Mary Woods, the President's loyal secretary, and a smaller book for Julie."

Washington Post columnist Maxine Cheshire, digging deeper, reported that Pat Nixon had retained custody of $52,000 worth of jewelry presented by the Saudi Arabian royal family.

Subsequently, other top officials, including former Vice President Spiro Agnew, former Secretary of State William Rogers, Sens. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., and J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., have hastily submitted jewelry and other valuable items to the State Department for cataloguing.

Deputy Comptroller General Robert Keller, who drafted the legal opinion on foreign travel, told us that although the Constitution and the gifts law prohibit foreign emoluments, no penalties exist for enforcing the prohibition.

The Independence Day weekend is an appropriate time to review and reviltaize our constitutional heritage. The Constitution, it seems to us, should be inviolate. Its provisions should be enforced. Its doctrine of freedom should be held sacred.

Under the Constitution, American government must be reformed and redefined, not by revolution but by restoration.

So they say

"If the terrorists think they can get us down with terror, they are sorely mistaken. We may have our quarrels but not over the fight against terror."

— Commandant V. Tabori of the Jerusalem Police Department stating Arab guerillas' efforts to enlist Arabs living within Israel has failed.

Gossip for today

One would think that "Playboy," "Playgirl," the radio, the boob tube and Senate investigations would be enough to keep the American people laughing all the way to the poorhouse. But in trying times like these we the people apparently feel it necessary to go to even greater lengths to get our minds off our troubles. —So, in some sections of the country (for a price, of course) it is now possible to dial a joke on your telephone. —and just for the record, I hasten to add, there is no truth to the contention that the phone company instituted this new service in order to take some of the load off its dial-a-prayer lines. No—sad to say,—the great American public has come to the conclusion that prayers aren't enough to get it out of its misery. — I also note that, acting apparently on the theory that artificial joy is the only panacea that will insure mass happiness, the California Supreme Court has ruled the ban on pinball machines is invalid. — So eat and drink, my friends, if you've got the price, but above all be merry, dial a joke and play the pinball machines, even though tomorrow, if things get much worse, you may die.

RAY CROMLEY

U.S. sets the pace for world inflation

WASHINGTON — There are many fancy explanations for inflation. But there's one that's real; low productivity gains mean high costs and high prices.

Output per man hour in U.S. business and industry grew a paltry 3.3 per cent a year between 1960 and 1974. That contrasts with 11 per cent in Japan and 6 per cent for the major nations of continental West Europe. It compares with 4 per cent for Britain, where industry has stagnated these past few years.

The situation is worse even than these sad statistics. Output per man hour here has been increasing only slightly more than 2 per cent annually of late; forecasts for the next decade run between 2.4 and 2.5 per cent, which insures continued inflation.

In the long run, improved productivity is normally the result of increased private investment. Those lands with heavy investment show strong upward trends in output per man hour.

Between 1960 and 1974, average private investment in the United States was 18 per cent of Gross National Product, excluding defense spending. This was the lowest rate of all Western industrial nations.

Japan's investment rate was 33.4 per cent almost double ours. Germany was not far behind Japan with 26 per cent, almost double ours. Germany was not far behind Japan with 26 per cent, followed by France with 24. The United Kingdom, with 19, was about in the same boat with the United States.

The question then is why U.S. industrial investment has not kept pace with that in foreign countries? The answer is simple. Investments are made when they are profitable; small profits — small investment.

To say industrial profits are low will shock many readers. But stock markets give the message loud and clear. Shares of great companies are selling for bargain basement prices. If profits are so great, why don't we all march down to the New York Stock Exchange and cash in on this opportunity? The door is open. But investors are staying away in droves. On the one hand we complain industrial profits are too big; on the other we say they are so low investments aren't worthwhile. We can't have it both ways.

Actually, the exorbitant prices we pay these days are — in the main — a result of inefficiency. This is not to close our eyes to some gouging and windfall profits.

We can cut profits further and get less investment, less earnings and almost no gain in productivity — and higher prices and lower real incomes. It's from the company-income pie that both the worker and the investor get their money. And it's only with increased productivity that a lid can be kept on prices. Without that increase, all the government controls the mind can imagine will do no good.

One note of explanation: to be sure, inflation is even greater in Japan, Western Europe and other industrial areas than in the United States. But their problems are greater.

They are not blessed with America's huge resources. They must import extremely large percentages of their fuel, food and other major materials. Labor in Europe and Japan has been making intense efforts to raise wage levels to those in the United States. Japanese industrial workers, for example, have won wage boosts which have averaged more than 15 per cent a year for the past decade — and this year it appears Japanese wages in major industries will go up by a whopping 20 to 30 per cent.

What do I think of boys with long hair

I think it looks ok if they have it nice and fixed. If th ey have it long and just let it hang there it doesn't look so good. Anyway that's what barber shops are for.

Julie Delgadillo
Age 11
Pomona

Dear Editor,

I don't care for long hair myself but if the boys would like to wear long hair they can. If the boys want to wear long hair and look like a girl please don't let me stop them. Its their life to live. They can wear their hair long or short. They should at least get a haircut once a month. Do you know that 50% of California boys and men are wearing long hair today. I think boys should be boys and girls should be girls. There are some boys at Walnut Avenue Elementary School that have long hair. I wonder how they like long hair.

Sincerely. Your friend,
Mike Schlange
Chino

What I think about boys with long hair

I think they should have SHORT hair because boys look like girls they look so feminine. I don't think boys should have the right to have long hair. If you ask my opinion they look very dumb and stoopid! That's what I think of boys with long hair.

Valerie Wright
Age 10
Chino

What I think of long hair on boys

I think that boys should wear their hair how they want because some boys look good with long hair and some don't. I would say that I don't like boys with long hair because if you're walking with them or you are in the car you can't tell which is the boy and which is the girl. Some boys wear long hair because they think they look good, but they don't.

Yanina Valenzuela

Pomona

What I think about long hair on boys

I think long hair on boys looks good because if you have short hair you look like you came from the 50's and it looks weird and stupid. But one thing I don't like about long hair you have to comb it after you wash it but I still think long hair looks good on boys.

Wayne Houghtaling
Pomona

What I think of long hair on boys

I think that long hair on boys looks neat. But on some boys I think it looks crummy. I think it looks good if they keep it combed. And if they wash it. I especially think it loks good if they part it on the side. I think that real long hair past their shoulders looks crummy. Sometimes you can't tell if they are a boy or a girl, because their hair is so long.

Claremont schools set election of president

CLAREMONT — Whether the third time is a charm will be put to the test Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. when the Claremont Unified School District board holds its organizational meeting and elects a president.

William A. Anderson edged out fellow board member Mary Ellen Kilsby last year by one vote for the gavel position

Two years ago Mrs. Kilsby tied for the president spot with Ernest Taylor in the voting, but ended up by casting her vote for Taylor.

If Mrs. Kilsby should win the chief post on the board, she will be the first woman board president since Mrs. Frances Drake served in 1965-67.

In other actions, the board will carry on further discussion of a proposed pilot program of a seventh grade at Sycamore Elementary School next year.

Sycamore Principal John Bobo told the board at the last meeting that he and the teachers were willing to try a seventh grade of 14 students at no extra cost to the district next fall.

The board tied, 2-2 on Bobo's proposal. Board member Mary Ellen Kilsby is expected to break the tie.

Bobo's earlier proposal was 28 seventh-graders, with the program open to all students in the district, but with Sycamore students getting first nod. The proposal would have cost the district the salary of an extra teacher and half an aide.

Chaffey senior wins 1974 cover girl title

SHERI DOLPH

ONTARIO — Sheri Dolph of 1205 Princeton St. has been named national 1974 High School Cover Girl.

The 17-year-old Chaffey High School senior was selected by Co-ed Magazine and Noxell Corp. as the teenage girl who best represents the American ideal in poise, personality and grooming.

Along with winning a $1,000 scholarship, she will appear on the October cover of Co-ed Magazine, and in a Cover Girl advertisement.

She was named Girl of the Month last December at Chaffey by Girls' League. She was a homecoming princess last fall.

Claremont High grad wins local scholarship

CLAREMONT — Robin Grady, a June Claremont High School graduate, won the Claremont Women's Club's 1974 scholarship.

ROBIN GRADY

She was chosen for her honor roll grade point average all through high school and her community service.

She is a three-year member of the Civil Air Patrol, and a past member of the Flying Samaritans. She is employed by the Pomona Valley YMCA as a part-time life guard and summer camp counselor.

She has worked as a volunteer at Claremont Manor, a retirement community.

She will study nursing at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut. She plans to transfer to a state university and major in social services. She would like eventually to work in the area of drug abuse and correction.

Pomona Kiwanis give 2 scholarship awards

POMONA — Kiwanis Club of Pomona presented new portable electric typewriters to Dirk Janz and Andrea Delunas, selected outstanding senior man and woman of the Pomona High School class of 1974.

Awards were based on outstanding scholarship and service.

Janz, 17, has been active in cross country, soccer and the Physics Club. He plans to attend Cal Poly and study biological sciences.

Miss Delunas, 17, has been active in Youth in Government in Sacramento, was senior class social chairman, a member of Inter-Act Club and active in student government.

She plans to attend Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut and San Diego State. She will study social sciences.

The typewriters were presented by Dr. David Bellows of the Pomona Noon Kiwanis Club.

Chaucer set as topic of noon lecture

CLAREMONT — "The Miller's Tale: English Revelry Through the Eyes of Cahucer" will be the subject of Dr. Barry Sanders, assistant professor of English at Pitzer College, when he speaks before the University Club of Claremont Tuesday noon at Griswold's.

Civil war drum

By DOROTHY HAMMOND

QUESTION: Could this old Civil War drum possibly have any monetary value? It is in entirely original condition, including the bright eagle decoration on the side shown in the photograph.

This drum was found among my grandfather's old things. We feel that it originally belonged to a relative, as my grandfather would have never purchased something like this.—L.'.

ANSWER: Civil War mementoes are of much interest to many collectors nowadays—and drums like this fine example are considered rare — commanding high prices when found, ranging from about $400 upward to around $800.

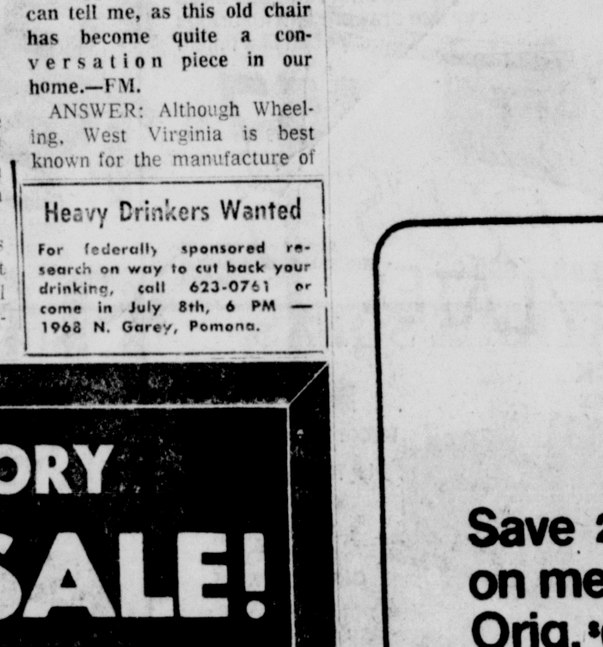
QUESTION: To appease my wife, I finally refinished "the" family rocker (on her side), and now I have a question to ask. While working on the chair seat, one of those that has a turned-down molded front, and up in the back, I found what I think to be a manufacturer's mark. Can you tell me if the letter "A," and the words "and Co., Wheeling" indicate the name of a furniture company? I will appreciate anything you can tell me, as this old chair has become quite a conversation piece in our home.—FM.



ANSWER: Although Wheeling, West Virginia is best known for the manufacture of fine glass, during the last century—many other important items are produced for local as well as regional consumption—including earthenware, stoneware, carpets, toleware, coverlets, furniture and chairs.

The markings on your chair indicate that it is a product of the Arbenz firm. John Arbenz—a German cabinetmaker—emigrated to the United States from Wurttemberg, Germany, in 1848. In 1851, he opened his shop in Wheeling—and in 1863, his brother-in-law joined the firm. It became known as Arbenz and Company, and was active in Wheeling until 1888 when Arbenz moved his operations to Chillicothe, Ohio.

QUESTION: During the 1920's, my parents received as a wedding gift, two tinted landscape scenes, signed by Wallace Nutting. Because both of these pictures are in very good condition, and nicely framed, they would like to know if their Nutting pictures are of any value, and if the artist was American or European?—Mrs. A. McI.

ANSWER: Dr. Wallace Nutting was one of America's most famous photographers and writers in the field of antiques, from the late 1800s, well into the present century.

Dr. Nutting, a minister, lost his sense of balance because of an inner ear condition. Since he felt that walking would help to cure this problem, he walked around the country taking photographs of interesting scenes—and literally thousands of his photos were sold from 1898-1918. Today, most of the landscape scenes sell from $12-$8, framed.

It was during this period that Nutting became interested in researching furniture design and began writing. His book titled "Furniture Treasury" is still in print, and considered to be one of the most authoritative books ever published in the antique field.

A beaver can cut down a willow tree five inches thick in three minutes.

Campers ready for emergencies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Campers generally are a healthy lot and they stay that way by being prepared for emergencies.

Most camping families carry first aid kits for use in treating minor mishaps such as cuts and bruises. Those who venture into wooded areas in hot climates should take along snakebite kits.

The odds are very good that careful families can camp year after year without encountering a serious situation, but there is always a possibility that a camper may be stricken when medical help is far away.

In such emergencies, a doctor generally is reached by telephone and in some cases he may be able to give lifesaving instructions if the symptoms are recognizable.

Quite often, though, the doctor may have to work at a disadvantage after he arrives at the scene, especially if the patient is unable to communicate.

Campers who have hidden allergies should carry on their person full details of their condition to warn the attending physicians against administering certain drugs.

The American Academy of Family Physicians, the American Academy of Allergists and the National Sheriffs' Association are among 21 national organizations which have endorsed Medic Alert, an emergency information system.

Administered by the Medic Alert Fiundation, a nonprofit organization based in Turlock, Calif., the system provides a metal emblem and medical information wallet card that contain the immediate medical problems of the wearer. Additional medical information and other material is kept in Medic Alert's Central Answering File. The telephone number of the Central Answering File is also engraved on the emblem and collect calls can be made at any hour of the day or night. In a matter of minutes, all of the pertinent information can be made available to a physician unfamiliar with the stricken person's medical history.

Lifetime membership fee is $7 and it includes a bracelet or necklace in stainless steel and one medical problem engraving.

Vacation campers plan to curtail use of gas

A recent survey made by Kampgrounds of America (KOA) indicates that campers generally believe the gasoline crisis has passed but plan to drive slower this summer to cut down on the use of fuel.

KOA, the nation's largest chain of family campgrounds, sent questionnaires to 1,500 owners of recreational vehicles at the end of April and received 440 responses.

The replies showed that almost half of the responding RV owners believe the energy crisis is over. Eighty seven per cent said they would drive slower.

Among those replying, 15 per cent said they intended to buy a new recreational vehicle this year, indicating they did not believe there will be another shortage of gasoline in the immediate future.

However, the Federal Energy Administration cautions that "spot gasoline shortages" can be expected around the nation this summer. But the FEA noted that motorists should not find serious problems in buying enough gas to meet their summertime needs.

The survey also showed that 63 per cent of the participants will probably use their campers nearly as much as they did last year with 60 per cent reporting they plan to travel 2,000 miles or more with their RV's. An earlier KOA survey, taken in January, showed only 43 per cent had planned traveling more than 2,000 miles this summer.

Of those responding to the April survey, 56 per cent said they planned to camp 22 days or more this summer. In this group 39 per cent said they hoped to spend more than 45 days camping.

Marijuana gradually winning more social acceptance

United Press International

Call it pot, grass, joint, mota, weed, reefer, smoke, ganja, Mary Jane —marijuana is still marijuana. And more than a decade after being discovered by middle class whites it appears to have gained a certain common acceptance, even though still illegal.

As a police spokesman in Washington, D.C., put it: "There is no campaign to make arrests. Every Joe Blow we arrest these days has marijuana in his pockets."

A survey by United Press International reporters revealed these developments on "the state of pot" around the country:

—At least a dozen states or other jurisdictions have "decriminalized", or are planning to decriminalize, possession of marijuana to make it a misdemeanor instead of a felony. Penalties for sellers and hard drugs, however, remain stiff.

—Smoking marijuana has become socially acceptable to so many people that it's no longer considered a particularly "chic" practice.

—With peer pressure to smoke marijuana as an "in" thing diminishing, growing numbers of young people are turning on to alcohol. It's cheaper and legal.

Legal turnabout

Perhaps the greatest turnabout has been in the legal realm.

In Oregon, possession of less than an ounce of marijuana is treated as a violation rather than a crime. Suspects get a ticket, as they would for a parking offense. The maximum penalty for possession is a $100 fine. That compares with up to a year in jail and a $1,000 fine before Oct. 5, 1973. Police, who worried about the law's impact, now say it has produced no special problems.

Earlier this year, voters in Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, Mich., approved local ordinances cutting penalties for possession and use of marijuana to $5.

Alabama law makes possession of pot for personal use a misdemeanor with the records wiped clean after 12 months without a second conviction. It's up to the jury to decide how much marijuana is appropriate for personal use.

In Los Angeles County, a new section of the penal code leaves the question of prosecution of certain narcotic related crimes to the discretion of judges. There are also "diversion laws" for cases of simple possession. Offenders are diverted away from prosecution and placed in a probation program lasting at least six months and no longer than two years. If the slate stays clean, prosecution is waived.

Therapy replaces jail

Jerry Jensen, Chicago regional director of the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, said that while rural courts will handle cases involving possession of a small amount of marijuana, most city courts don't bother.

The Cook County (Chicago) State's Attorneys Office has a program in which first offenders in simple possession cases are required to attend therapy sessions for six weeks, then records are expunged.

While New York's much publicized drug act of 1973 provides mandatory prison sentences for heroin sellers (ranging from one year to life depending on the amount) the penalties for marijuana possession and sale are lighter than they were before the new law. Judges are not obliged to impose jail sentences in any marijuana cases and frequently don't in the case of first offenders.

Also in New York, any marijuana sale is a class "C" felony, carrying a minimum sentence of zero to three years and a maximum of 15 years, as is possession of one ounce or more. Possession of less than one quarter of an ounce is a misdemeanor and can bring up to a year in jail. Possession of a quarter ounce to one ounce is a grade "D" felony and can mean a prison term of three to seven years.

Other jurisdictions which have or are expected to approve legislation to reduce penalties for possessing small amounts of marijuana (generally no more than 1 or ½ ounce) include the city of Seattle, the District of Columbia, and Texas (though conviction for selling can get you 20 years in the Texas Penitentiary).

Perhaps the most active nationwide lobbyist for decriminalization is the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, NORML. Based in Washington, it is financed primarily by the Playboy Foundation.

Its advisory board includes former Attorney General Ramsey Clark, John Finlator, former deputy director of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, and Dr. Benjamin Spock.

Its thesis: "In a nutshell, that marijuana is not sufficiently dangerous to the user or to our society for its private possession and use by adults to be made a criminal offense."

R. Keith Stroup, NORML's executive director, says he expects no major action on either the federal or state levels before the November elections. But he thinks decriminalization laws pending in Massachusetts, Vermont and Minnesota have a chance of passing in 1975. And he predicts progress, but not immediate victory, in New York, California and Michigan.

"In 1976, marijuana reform will be more visible than ever before," he said.

How many smoke?

There are three decriminalization bills pending in the U.S. Congress (one of which would apply only to the District of Columbia). Sen. Harold Hughes, D.-Iowa., chairman of the Alcoholism and Narcotics subcommittee of the Labor and Public Welfare Committee says he doesn't expect any major breakthroughs, but has promised two days of hearings in July.

How many people actually smoke marijuana?

The most recent and reliable figures come from President Nixon's National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse which reported to Nixon and the Congress in March, 1973. According to the commission, 15 per cent of all adults in 1971 had tried pot at least once. In 1972, the figure was 16 per cent. The figure for youths, 12 to 17, was 14 per cent both years.

Decriminalization of marijuana possession has been endorsed by so many organizations it's becoming suspiciously respectable. The list starts with the President's Commission (though Nixon personally disavowed the recommendation), and includes the American Bar Association, the American Public Health Association and the National Education Association.

If lawmakers are more amenable to liberalizing marijuana laws, it follows that law enforcement officers can be fairly casual about upholding the law of the land, state, county or city.

"We should devote our time and resources to apprehending and convicting burglars, rapists, murderers, hard drug pushers and the like, not incidental and casual users of marijuana," an Oregon district attorney said.

Lt. Archie Rippeto, who coordinates narcotics investigations in St. Louis and five surrounding counties, was asked whether police ignore marijuana smokers at events such as rock concerts.

"Obviously," he said, "we can't go in and arrest the entire occupancy of (an) auditorium or any other gathering...Our efforts are directed at those people responsible for the distribution as opposed to the personal use..."

"The public seems to be complacent," said a federal law enforcement officer in Miami, who asked not to be identified. "You don't see anybody demanding strong enforcement."

In Detroit, Police Commissioner Philip A. Tanian officially presses for strict enforcement. But one patrolman disagreed: "Unless somebody gets blatant about it, we aren't making a big thing about pot."

In some areas, authorities are having as much of a problem with alcohol and thrill pills—especially among young teen-agers.

While describing marijuana as a "major problem," Sacramento, Calif., Police Lt. Harold O'Kane, chief of the vice detail, said, "Alcohol has come back to haunt us. Drinking is the 'in' thing now."

Students aid state in combatting crime

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — California law enforcement authorities are enlisting the help of junior high school students in an effort to prevent bicycle theft, vandalism and drug abuse.

The state Justice Department's program, called Student Training on Prevention (STOP), has been praised by both police and school officials and is rapidly spreading throughout the state.

Under STOP, 7th and 8th grade volunteers are trained in teaching methods and sent into elementary school classrooms— mostly fourth, fifth and sixth grades—to instruct pupils about bicycle safety and the consequences of bicycle theft, vandalism and drug abouse.

Attorney General Evelle J. Younger, head of the Justice Department, said in discussing STOP:

"Our experience in working with youth in crime prevention programs such as the one here convinces us that the most effective prevention can be done by young people themselves, relating to and working with younger children. We believe that peer influence is most effective."

Sidney Chrew, a regional administrator in the department's Crime Prevention Unit and leader of STOP, said the program represents a unique approach to teaching youngsters about the criminal justice system.

Launched last year as a pilot project at four schools in the San Juan Unified School District in Sacramento County, Chrew said STOP currently is being conducted in 23 districts. He also said his unit is getting a lot of calls from other districts interested in starting the program in their schools.

"It has grown to the point that we can hardly keep up with it," he said.

Under the program, junior high school student volunteers called "preventers" receive training from teachers and police officers on teaching techniques and STOP subject matter.

The teaching techniques include use of pupuets and a role-playing exercise where elementary students participate in skits on the subject matter to aid learning.

The skits involve situations taken from actual case histories. The students act out roles of both adults and youths in such situations as breaking a store's window and smoking pot.

He said students are allowed to draw their own conclusions from the role-playing situations. "We don't tell them that's right or that's wrong," he added.

James R. Runge, superintendent of the La Mesa Valley School District in San Diego County, said he believes STOP has "contributed significantly to the development of positive attitudes among students toward law enforcement officers and the prevention of crime."

Don Maxwell, vice principal of a Fresno elementary school, said the program is one of the best teaching techniques he has observed in his 17-year teaching career.

Joan Clegg and Betty Immel, teachers in the Lincoln Unified School District in Sacramento County, said STOP is a "natural complement" to their school's curriculum on the justice system, according to Chrew.

Chrew said the crime prevention unit has developed basic materials, including teacher and student manuals, for setting up the STOP program at schools. School districts can obtain the materials from the unit, which also loans them puppets and film. Unit personnel also are available to provide technical assistance to the districts.

Chrew said STOP is based on the belief that crime prevention efforts must begin with children at a very early age before fixed patterns of thought and behavior have developed and that "young people can be very successful trainers and motivators of younger children."

Postmaster General angry over receiving complaints

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Postmaster General Elmer T. Klassen is angry that he gets complaints, not congratulations, for his postal reforms.

Since the Postal Service was converted from a cabinet level department to an independent government agency in 1971, Klassen said, it has speeded mail deliveries with fewer, better paid workers.

The administration proposed in April, 1970 that the price of sending a first class letter be increased from 8 to 10 cents, but Klassen deferred that increase until this past March by trimming the work force.

"I would never do that again," Klassen said in an interview. "I would put the rate increaese in because you never get a damn bit of thanks for it anyway—for deferring it."

One big accomplishment, Klassen said, has been setting up delivery standards for the first time.

Delayed Sbpoena

"As an illustration, a letter mailed by 4 o'clock within a 250-mile area will be delivered the next day," he said. "We're doing it 95 to 96, 97 Or 98 per cent of the time throughout the county.

"I realize that they always find a horror story where on piece of mail got lost. I'm sure you heard the story about this famous subpoena that was sent and the misinformation that the press released on that one."

Klassen referred to a widely publicized incident in which a subpoena issued by a Los Angeles judge for President Nixon to appear in his court took eight days to reach Washington.

Klassen said a Postal service investigation showed the subpoena was mailed on Wednesday, Feb. 6, instead of on the previous Monday, and reached Washington Friday — too late for delivery that day.

Because the court here was closed for the weekend, the document could not be delivered until Monday. The Postal service conceded that because a substitute carrier forgot to pick up the mail designated for special handling, it was delivered Tuesday.

No Miracles

"The criticism I have of the people in the press is they never get the facts before they write some of these damned stories," Klassen said. "Of course, the retraction winds up in the obituary column and usually nobody pays any attention to it."

The Postal Service also has been sharply criticized by influential congressmen who continue to cite poor mail service, question Klassen's capital outlays for new buildings and equipment, accuse him of surrounding himself with "cronies" and of wasting money on lavish office surroundings for himself.

Klassen's general response was that the critics seem to expect a "miracle."

"The degree of impatience demonstrated by people who have been trying to expect miracles out of this change is a very discouraging thing," Klassen said. "In other words, what Congress passed was a piece of legislation, not a miracle. The problems we have today were not created in the last two or three years. They were generations in the making."

"Cronyism" Answer

About repeated charges that he has put cronies into top level postal jobs. Klassen said only:

"Totally unlike the former post office department, all appointments are based on need and merit. We have no unnecessary jobs on our headquarters staff. Each has worked with great diligence and loyalty on behalf of the U.S. Postal Service. I can assure you they are needed. Our top level management structure is very stringent compared to any other industry."

—During the year ended June 30, 1973, the postal service handled 89.7 billion pieces of mail with 33,000 fewer employes.

Houseplants should be kept from cats

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Problem: Both my cats love to eat my plants and they often get sick, deathly once. How do you lick this problem when you have an apartment with both cats and plants? I don't want to give up either one, nor do I want them to do in each other. Help! — P.Y.

Dear P.Y.: Because many houseplants are poisonous to cats (and puppies, for that matter) the best answer is to keep them apart. Compromises are necessary to allow them to coexist compatibly. These include isolating plants in a green room, hanging plants out of reach, or barricading plants within a room with glorified chicken wire or other effective barriers.

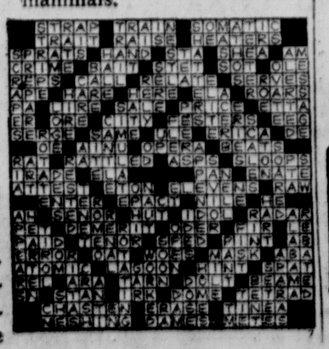
The ideal arrangement would be to have cats and greenery casually intermingled with the confidence that cats would never nibble. Such confidence is, however, seldom justified. If your cats simply aren't going to be separated from your various plants, then it's at least worth the effort to sprout rye grass or some other gourmet greenery appealing to feline tastes which they might turn to first. Also, reduce the tendency of your cats to eat greens of any kind by keeping them well-groomed to help prevent hairballs, utilizing hairball laxative preparations if needed.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our new outside pool has water that's well-aged and circulating so it drips back into the pool. It's of large size so the fish aren't crowded. We tested the water before introducing fish to be sure it was safe, but even so since putting them in, the fish have not adjusted well.

They're in good water with plenty of room and they're well fed. What might their problem be, or does it just take time to adjust? — N.J.

Dear N.J.: Your outside pool sounds good, but you didn't mention one critical point as far as the fish themselves are concerned, and that's security. Do you have some means of shading areas of the pool to protect it against the hot sun? These same shady areas can be used as retreats, whether you're using plant cover or some other means. This is important for the fish's well-being. The psychological and practical value of plants on or in the water should not be underestimated.

Sadly, perhaps, the easier it is for you to observe those fish in the pool, the more insecure and vulnerable they are to predators, be they amphibians, reptilians, birds or mammals.



Lose Weight Fast With New Multi-Vitamin Tablet

HEALTHFUL NEW DISCOVERY STOPS HUNGER PANGS, TABLETS CONTAIN ALL DAILY REQUIREMENTS + VITAMIN E

LOS ANGELES (Special) - New scientific discoveries have produced a "multi-vitamin" diet tablet that eliminates hunger pangs and prevents overeating. It quickly works wonders on overweight people and is gaining great popularity across the country with glowing reports of easy and healthy weight loss "while eating almost as much as you want."

Nutritionists' files are bulging with happy testimonials from formerly overweight people who are now trim and slim again. Those who use the new multi-vitamin (plus E) diet tablet report that it is so effective you will lose weight the very first day and keep on losing day after day until you reach your most attractive size - without exercise or starvation.

Stops Hunger Pangs

Scientists report that if you are lacking even one essential vitamin or nutrient you will experience hunger pangs. "The 'trick' is to eliminate hunger pangs by supplying your body with ALL the right vitamins, minerals and nutrients on a daily basis," states Dr. Roger Johnson, world renowned nutritionist.

All Daily Requirements

The new chewable diet tablet, taken before each meal, contains ALL THE DAILY REQUIREMENTS of vitamins and minerals PLUS vitamin E and other ingredients that help curb and control the appetite. It also acts as an aid to all-around good health and energy. Best of all, you can still eat almost as much as you want of the "forbidden foods" like steak, chicken, fish, sauces, gravies, bacon & eggs and still lose weight.

NOW AVAILABLE

To get a copy of this successful diet plan and multi-vitamins (plus E) tablets, send $5.00 for 10 day supply (or $7.00 for 20 day supply or $10.00 for 30 day supply) to: NUTRI-DIET, Dept. A34, 22028 Ventura Blvd., Woodland Hills, Ca. 91364 (money-back guarantee).

How scientists view marijuana

By ROBERT STRAND

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Whatever your belief about the effects of marijuana on the human body, you can find a scientist to say you're absolutely correct.

And both the advocates and opponents accuse each other of playing politics, of rank incompetence, or of distorting or faking data.

Hardin B. Jones of the University of California says marijuana starts cancer, atrophies the brain, injures the memory, depresses the sex drive, causes sterility and threatens to triple the number of deformed babies born in the United States.

Dr. Joel Fort of Berkeley, Calif., says that on a harmfulness scale of 0 to 10, caffeine would rank 1, alcohol and tobacco 9 or 10, and marijuana only 3.

Jones, a physiologist and medical physicist, has studied marijuana and its effects since 1964. Fort, a physician, has specialized in drugs most of his 25-year career.

Hormone reduction

Since the 1972 report of the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse, the debate has been enlivened by a growing stream of scientific papers.

Recently a study of 20 young men smoking five to 18 "joints" a week for six months found sharply reduced levels of the male hormone testosterone. One-third also showed reduced sperm counts.

The study was reported by Dr. Robert C. Kolodny of the Reproductive Biology Research Foundation in St. Louis which is headed by famed sex researcher Dr. William H. Masters.

Masters says the findings suggest that pregnant women using marijuana may impair the development of unborn male children.

Big Variables

Jones commented of the St. Louis research:

"I conclude that the whole hormonal profile changes in association with marijuana. I don't see any users who are very virile, and the shift among them to the neuter or the feminine is marked."

Responds Fort:

"This is a glaring example of how a mountain is made out of a molehill. Testosterone has as much relation to sexuality as the nail polish a woman might wear."

Wherever the truth lies, it is known that one form of marijuana derivative can be 50 times more potent than another. The size of the joint, how it is packed, and how much smoke is inhaled, are also big variables.

Last January, Dr. Morton A. Stenchever of the University of Utah found an average of 3.4 chromosome breaks per 100 white blood cells in a group of 49 persons who had used marijuana for an average of three years. The normal rate would be 1.5.

Jones says this high chromosome breakage parallels the level among survivors of Hiroshima. He speculates that birth deformities among offspring of 30 million pot smokers could triple to 10 per cent.

Fort says no conclusions can be drawn from the Stenchever paper. First, he says scientists must determine what, if anything, happens in the sperm cell, and what, if anything, happens to actual progeny of a large group of pot users.

One little publicized recent study, financed by the National Institutes of Mental Health, reports on tests in Jamaica, where Dr. Vera Rubin used extensive clinical tests to compare 30 marijuana users with 30 non-users.

The tests showed no significant social, psychological or physiological differences between the two groups, other than that the non-users seemed slightly more prone to serious crime. Non-using Jamaicans tend to be devoted to rum.

Jones suggests that the Jamaican study has not been publicized because it is poor science. Other critics say the government did not publicize the $158,000 study because of politics.

Supported by government money, dozens more studies are now in progress. Jones insists that more research will prove him right in determining the dangerous effects of marijuana usage. But Fort, while agreeing that more research is needed, says "the most deleterious effect of pot smoking now is going to jail. We have defined something as a crime, and then made the punishment much worse than the crime itself in the name of saving the criminal."

Honeymoon will wait for these newlyweds

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The honeymoon will have to wait for Loren Marshall, 26, and his bride, Sandra, 25.

Superior Court Commissioner Barbara Mull married the couple in the Hall of Justice, but the newlyweds couldn't even kiss after the ceremony — they are jail prisoners, and were escorted right back to their cells.

Marshall will leave next week to begin a seven-year prison term on a robbery conviction. His bride will be transferred later to a woman's prison, also to start a robbery sentence.

Syria's Assad: Arabs must keep pressure on America

CAIRO (UPI) — Syrian President Hafez Assad said in an interview published recently the Arabs must keep up the pressure on the United States to further develop the Nixon administration's recent policy changes in the Middle East.

In an interview with the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram, Assad said new U.S. peace initiatives in the Middle East were prompted by "what the Arabs accomplished in the October war.

"It made the United States realize the shortcomings of their previous attitude and take quick action in an attempt to change it," Assad said.

"The American policy change has not yet reached the extent it should go to. We have to exert efforts to develop the American stand," Assad said.

"Such development is naturally in harmony with the interests of the American people and conflicts with the interests of world Zionism."

"America is committed to exert efforts for the sake of world peace and we have to deepen such commitments," the Syrian president said.

He said a high-ranking Syrian official was leaving shortly for the United States for talks "that may deal with spheres of cooperation, but will concentrate primarily on the question of (Israel) occupation of Arab land and the rights of the Palestinian people."

Assad said Syria and Egypt would go to the Middle East peace conference when it reconvenes in Geneva because "it will be the effective means of bringing about peace in the area.

"But we have to be wide awake to prevent Israel taking advantage of the conference to gain time to swallow up the achievements of Egypt and Syria during the October war and the Golan battles," he said.

He said Egypt and Syria, supported by other Arab states must "follow up the situation with more vigilance, even if this necessitates a return to the battlefield."

Firm recalls 30,000 autos

GOTEBORG (UPI) — Volvo, the Swedish automobile firm, advised its agents around the world Friday to recall up to 30,000 1973 models to repair a defective gas pedal that could send an automobile into its highest speed, a Volvo spokesman said.

"There is a risk that the gas pedal can fasten in the floor rug of 25,000 or 30,000 1973 Volvo models," the spokesman said.

MONTGOMERY WARD

Ancient ship revitalized

LONDON (UPI) — She was King Henry VIII's secret weapon and for 429 years she lay unsuspected a few feet below one of the world's busiest shipping lanes.

She was perhaps the world's first battleship and Henry, of the many wives, named her the Mary Rose after his sister. She carried his fortunes into battle and before his horrified eyes she turned turtle and sank without firing a shot.

But some day soon she may be seen again as the splendid warship she was that day in 1545. Alexander McKee thinks the Mary Rose can become another Vasa, the 17th Century warship Swedish archeologists plucked from the mud of Stockholm harbor.

McKee found the Mary Rose in the Solent channel of Britain's south coast. He has worked on her for nine years. Given another few years and a few million dollars, he intends to bring her up.

Prince Philip and Lord Mountbatten have contributed to a public fund launched recently to raise the necessary cash. Queen Elizabeth had McKee to lunch to discuss his impossible-seeming project.

Good condition

"We've exposed about half the ship around the stern," McKee said in an interview, "and we've found it in good condition—one might almost say astoundingly good condition.

"We calculate we need a five-year program of continuous work. That will establish the ship's size, its possible weaknesses, and whether in fact it will be possible to raise her intact. We're almost certain she can be raised, but we're being very cautious."

McKee is a professional historian and an amateur skindiver. The Mary Rose made him a careful, patient archaeologist. His new Souvenir Press book, "King Henry VIII's Mary Rose," tells the ship's story.

It begins with her refit into Henry's secret weapon—the first ship to carry guns that could sink rather than just damage other ships. Henry made her vice-flagship of a fleet he personally commanded against a maurauding French squadron off England's south cost.

Crew Panicked

For days he kept his fleet bottled in Portsmouth harbor. Finally he ordered it into battle. The top-heavy Mary Rose, gun ports open and overloaded with fighting men, led the fleet down a narrow channel.

But at a dogleg in the channel the ship turned too sharply and heeled. Her crew panicked. Water flooded through the gun ports. Under the king's eyes, in what McKee calls "a moment of pure cinema," she sank with 400 men in a matter of seconds.

Henry won the battle without her, then employed Venetian craftsmen to raise her. They tried for four years, and failed.

McKee set out in 1965 to find her. He was searching for a dozen historic wrecks under the Solent, one of the world's most bustling sea lanes.

In a year he was convinced the Mary Rose lay under a featureless mound on the sea bed. Slow years of inch-by-inch work, using makeshift equipment and amateur divers, showed McKee's teams they had found something beyond their wildest hopes.

Miraculous accident

"A miraculous accident of preservation" kept the Mary Rose virtually intact, McKee said. More than just a wreck, however historic, she lies there much as she was on the day she went down.

McKee said the Mary Rose can plug two gaps in historic knowledge—of ship construction in Henry's time and of the revolutionary guns he developed.

She was "a key vessel in the startlingly rapid evolution of the wooden battleship as a floating gun platform," he wrote. The Mary Rose conceals "virtually unknown technological changes so great as to result very shortly in European dominance of half the world for many centuries."

Russian Orthodox religion survives

By BARRY JAMES

MOSCOW (UPI) — "Any notion of a Lord God, even any trifling with a Lord God is an unspeakable abomination," said V.I. Lenin, founder of the Soviet state.

Fifty years after Lenin's death, the Russian Orthodox Church lives under difficulties that can hardly be imagined by Christians in the West —but its survival is not in doubt.

Perhaps realizing that religion is like a nail which gets more deeply embedded the harder it is hammered, the state has given up outright persecution of the church.

It still surrounds the Orthodox and other churches with bureaucratic harassments and police surveillance. It blocks the career possibilities of many young believers. It designates places of public worship and allows only those with government licenses to preach.

But priests no longer fill labor camps, and in return for a relatively quiet existence, the church refrains from criticizing Soviet policies.

Christian intellectuals argue about whether the church should become more outspoken and risk a return of persecution, or remain content with its present ambiguous position.

Three church leaders recently discussed the present state of the church with a group of American newsmen. The meeting was arranged by the official Novosti press agency.

The churchmen were Metropolitan Yuvenaliy, chief spokesman for the Moscow patriarchate, Archbishop Peterim, chairman of the patriarchate's publishing department, and Archbishop Vladimir, rector of the Zagorsk theological academy and seminary.

With a Novosti representative taping their answers, they spoke circumspectly. But they did not appear, as some critics have described them, like men appointed by the authorities to oversee the decline and fall of religion.

"The church is growing," Yuvenaliy said. "It is alive."

Yuvenaliy said parish records are not kept, but judging from Sunday offerings, the church regularly attracts 30 to 50 million people out of a population of 250 million.

"If you came to our churches you would find faith and worship," he said, "not coffee drinking, dancing or clubs. On Sundays people go to divine services lasting three or four hours and, believe me, they stay until the end. We get no requests to shorten the services."

Yuvenaliy said there are fewer churchgoers now than in Czarist times, "but there is no comparison in the quality. People go to church today out of conviction and to obtain inspiration rather than out of habit or tradition. This is our strength."

Many people, Yuvenaliy said, come to the church through reading the atheist magazine Science and Religion.

"A man is born and does not know God. In his school years, he is taught to feel there is no God. Then he reads the magazine and starts to think of the nearly 2,000 years it took to make people believe there is no God," Yuvenaliy said.

To counter the wealth of atheist propaganda, the church has a small publishing operation of its own which turns out a calendar, theological works and a small number of prayer books.

With Bibles on the black market fetching up to $195, the publishing house cannot begin to fulfill demand.

The strains to which the church is exposed lead to self-policing on politics. For example, Patriarch Pimen, the head of the church, ordered a Moscow priest to stop giving question-and-answer sermons in which he dealt frankly with morality in an atheist society.

FTC wants to know if automobile claims are really 'on the level'

By EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — You've seen those ads that seem to promise more miles than you've ever been able to coax out of a gallon of gasoline.

The claims made by the automakers certainly aren't modest. The Federal Trade Commision (FTC) wants to know if they're honest.

The mileage figures have become an important part of auto advertising since the oil shortage created long lines at service stations during the winter. Gasoline climbed to 60 cents a gallon and car sales—especially of big cars—plummeted.

The auto industry efforts to counter the sales slump were made more difficult by mileage figures from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) based on a "suburgan-urban driving cycle." Automakers claimed the figures weren't represenative, mainly because of the poor showing by the large cars.

The disagreement between the auto companies on the one hand the FTC and EPA on the other seems to boil down to a simple matter of whose figures are right.

Both Sets Correct

In reality, both sets are correct. It all depends on what you're trying to show.

The EPA figures represent a 7.5-mile driving cycle "patterned after the conditions the average driver encounters going from home to work." That is supposed to account for about 55 per cent of all driving in the United States.

Most of the auto industry ads show results from highway driving at about 50 to 55 miles per hour—a range in which cars operate more efficiently. This represents the other 45 per cent of U.S. driving.

Eric O. Stork, a deputy assistant administrator of the EPA and the man who has taken most of the heat for the agency's mileage figures, says the EPA results are the most representative that are available.

He questions the industry mileage claims, saying they aren't truly representative of the way Americans drive.

Depends on Criteria

"The whole thing depends on what your criteria are, what you're looking for," he said. "If all you want is a big number, I could get you 100 miles per gallon. But is that relevant?"

Ask yourself this question:

"When do I most often check the mileage of my car?" You probably answer: "When I take a trip."

Most drivers try to compute the fuel enconomy of their cars by filling up the tank just before a long highway trip and then measuring the gallons used after the trip. The figure they get is better than if they measured their usual "home to work to supermarket and shopping center" driving cycle.

A recent series of newspaper, magazine and television commercials by the Ford Motor Co., for its small cars showed them obtaining between 26.6 miles per gallon and 32.4 m.p.g. on a 379-mile highway test through Arizona and California. The lowest was the 26.6 m.p.g. by a Mercury Comet and the highest the 32.4 m.p.g. by a Mercury Capri.

The FTC wants Ford to show these figures are correct and "representative of the performance un ordinary driver can expect routinely under all driving patterns or conditions." Ford has established an elaborate procedure to deal with such requests. It had the answers to most of the questions before they were asked.

Not City Driving

Tom Daniels, advertising manager for the Lincoln-Mercury Division, said that serires of advertisements never claimed the mileage results were obtained in city driving. He said they were designed to show motorists they could expect fuel economy that differed from the EPA figures.

It cost Ford about $100,000 for the time alone in a 60-second prime time television commercial showing the Comet and Capri. Of that, 28 seconds was used as a "disclaimer"—or as the automakers call it, an "affirmative disclosre."

That "affirmative disclosure" basically tells how the test was run, how long it took, that nonprofessional drivers never exceeded 50 miles per hour and that you—the motorist—might actually average less because cars vary as does equipment, maintenance and the way each car is driven.

Daniels says the "affirmative disclosure" lends credibility to the ad or commercial. It also answers the FTC questions.

"If we don't have credibility in a piece of advertising, we're wasting our money," Daniels said. "Unless people understand very clearly what you're saying, then you don't have credibility."

Pediatrics talk slated

WEST COVINA — Dr. Allan J. Ebbin, associate professor of pediatrics at USC School of Medicine, will speak July 18, at 7:30 p.m. at Sunset school.

The meeting is being sponsored by the parents group of the San Gabriel Valley Regional Center and is open to the public.

Dr. Ebbin, also assistant director of the genetics division at County-USC Medical Center, will discuss handicapped children with regard to young people whose families still are in the planning stage.

Connors is Wimbledon champion

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Jimmy Connors wrote the ending Saturday to a story that opened before he was born when he defeated Ken Rosewall 6-1, 6-1, 6-4 to win the Wimbledon men's singles title before a crowd so partisan it forgot its traditional sportsmanship to applaud his errors.

Connors, the 21-year-old third seed from Belleville, Ill. became the youngest victor since 1956, the year Lew Hoad beat Rosewall.

Saturday Connors proved too strong and fast in his youth for the 39-year-old Australian, who has won everything in the game but failed for the fourth, and probably last time, to win a final at the Mecca of tennis he first visited in 1952.

The 15,000 in center court wanted so badly to see Rosewall climax his career with a triumph here that they even cheered a Connors doublefault, an uncharacteristic lapse at this hallowed birthplace of tournament tennis.

But the southpaw American gave so invincible an exhibition of power tennis at its best that by the end of the match the crowd, headed by the Duke and Duchess of Kent, were applauding his deep drives, placements and court-covering ability.

Rosewall, who hit purple patches during his defeats of Stan Smith and John Newcombe en route to the final, made Connors' task that much easier by playing probably his worst match at Wimbledon. He did nothing right from the opening game when he served two doublefaults.

Only two final losers have been more decisively beaten since the war—Martin Mulligan and Willy Bungert. Rosewall stood with head bowed while Connors, tears in his eyes, held aloft the golden cup presented to him by the Duke of Kent.

"I've dreamed of this moment since I was six years old," Connors said. "I never played as well as I played today. I played unbelievable tennis. And at no better time."

Connors, who earlier this year won the Australian and South African titles, earned a check of $24,000. His victory was all the more sweet because he is not popular in the locker room following his insistence of going it alone and having nothing to do with the Association of Tennis Professionals.

Rosewall, richer by $14,400, said: "I can't understand it. I thought I would play well today but I couldn't get into the match. It might have been a letdown from Friday (the defeat of Smith in 3-½ hours). It would take a lot out of anyone and certainly took more out of me."

Victory also meant Connors opens the dancing at the Wimbledon ball tonight with his fiancee, Chris Evert, who won the ladie's title Friday by defeating Russia's Olga Morozova 6-0 6-4.

CONNORS CONNECTS

USA's Jimmy Connors returns a serve by Australia's Ken Rosewall during Saturday's Wimbledon Men's Singles final match. Connors easily defeated the Aussie vet 6-1, 6-1, 6-4.

Dodgers beaten

MONTREAL (UPI) — Bob Bailey slammed a three-run homer and pitcher Mike Torrez scattered eight hits Saturday night, leading the Montreal Expos to a 6-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Bailey's homer, his 10th of the year, came in the first inning following singles by Willie Davis and Ken Singleton and sent Don Sutton down to his seventh loss in 13 games. Sutton, who has now lost five in a row, has not won since May 14.

Torrez, going the route for only the second time this year, walked three and struck out four in boosting his record to 8-5. The Dodgers' only run came in the first when Dave Lopes singled and eventually came around to score on an infield out by Jim Wynn.

The Expos went ahead 4-1 in the fourth inning when Pepe Frias hit a sacrifice fly with the bases loaded to score Bailey, and they added two more runs in the seventh on a single by Davis, a double by Singleton, a passed ball and a single by Mike Jorgensen.

Bob Gibson singled home the winning run during a seventh inning rally as he stopped the Cincinnati Reds with three hits while pitching the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-1 victory Saturday.

The victory was the fifth of the season against eight losses for Gibson, whose six strikeouts left him three shy of a career total of 3,000.

Clay Kirby, who wound up with his fifth loss against six victories, was nursing a 1-0 shutout when the Cards erupted for three runs in the seventh inning. Bake McBride touched off the rally by beating out a bunt single. He went to second on Tim McCarver's infield hit and continued to third when shortstop Dave Concepcion threw wildly to first after fielding the Cardinal catcher's ground ball.

Ken Reitz then grounded to Dan Driessen at third and McBride, caught in a rundown, reached home safely when Johnny Bench, who homered in the second for the Reds' only run, dropped the ball while making the tag. After pinchhitter Tim Dwyer flied out, Gibson singled home McCarver with the tie-breaking run.

Tom Hall replaced Kirby and Reitz scored the final run of the inning on the Red southpaw's wild pitch.

In other games, San Francisco downed the New York Mets 5-2, and Atlanta shaded Chicago 3-2 in 10 innings.

Gary Matthews slammed a two-run homer, one of three hits for him, off Met relief ace Tug McGraw in the sixth inning to provide the slumping San Francisco Giants with a win over New York. Randy Moffitt, making his 34th appearance, came on in relief of the struggling John D'Acquisto, now 7-7, in the seventh inning and allowed only a single and two walks the rets of the way for his 13th save. Met starter George Stone, 2-7, was tagged with the loss.

Darrell Evans doubled home Ralph Garr with one out in the top of the 10th inning to lift the Braves and relief ace Lew Krausse to a decision over the Cubs. Evans' hit, the only extra-base blow of the game, came off loser Oscar Zamora, 1-2, who pitched the final three innings for the Cubs. The Braves, who had lost five in a row to the Cubs, collected 12 hits off four pitchers, with Evans adding two singles to his hit parade.

Philadelphia bested San Diego 6-2, Montreal trimmed Los Angeles 6-1 and Pittsburgh shaded Houston 1-0, in night games.

Dave Cash's two-run sixth-inning single helped Dick Ruthven snap a six-game losing streak when the Phillies scored a victory over the Padres. Ruthven, 3-7, hurled the first six innings and picked up the victory when the Phillies rallied for three runs to knock out Lowell Palmer in the sixth inning.

Drivers take feud on track in race today

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. (UPI) — Feuding teammates Jackie Oliver and George Follmer go at it again today in their matching UOP Shadows, this time at Road Atlanta in race No. 2 of the 1974 Canadian-American Challenge Cup series.

Oliver, from Surry, England, beat Follmer, of Huntington Beach, Calif., by less than two seconds in the Can-Am opener three weeks ago at Mosport Park in Bowmanville, Ont.

Follmer, who won here at Road Atlanta the past two years and could have won at Mosport except for tire trouble, is favored to win despite Oliver beating him in Friday's qualifying run by 1.1. seconds.

Although the two front-liners are teammates, there has been hard feelings between them and they actually got into a fist fight at Mosport.

"Yes, we had a bit of a punch-up in the garage before the race," said Oliver. "George started throwing punches and I ducked and ran. I'm not the physical type."

Follmer said he thinks his problem with Oliver "is solved now. This time I'll be out to beat him on the track instead of the garage."

The low-slung, black UOP Shadows, powered by 735-horsepower Chevrolet V-8 engines, have taken over the favorite's role in Can-Am racing because of the absence of Team McLaren and Porsche teams which dominated this series in the past.

The featured Can-Am will be run in two sections today over the demanding, 2.52-mile Road Atlanta course. The first heat, a 30-lap race, will be run at 2 p.m. EDT; the second, 50 laps, is scheduled to start at 4 p.m.

Qualifying and practice for the Can-Am and Formula Vee races planned for the weekend were hampered by rain both Friday and Saturday. Oliver won the Can-Am pole Friday with a lap time of 1:14.9 and an average speed of 121 miles per hour and Follmer took the outside front position with a time of 1:16.0.

Want girls programs separate, equal to boys

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Representatives of state athletic associations from all 50 states ended their week-long convention here Saturday by urging state high school associations sponsor "separate but equal athletic programs for girls and boys."

The resolution, adopted without dissent, said such a limitation of girls teams to competition against other girls teams would "provide more opportunities for girls to participate" in inter-scholastic sports.

Jack Roberts, an administrative aide of the National Federation of Statt High School Associations, said the American Medical Association has condemned sexually integrated athletic teams.

"Another point," Roberts noted, "is that permitting girls to be on boys teams would limit the number of participants and reduce the number of girls receiving recognition."

In another action, the delegates voted to oppose an amendment to a Senate bill offered by Sen. Marlow Cook, R-Ky., which they said would give college athletes the ability to renege on their athletic committments.

Clifford Fagan, executive secretary of the federation, said the Cook amendment is favored by the Amateur Athletic Union, and would allow athletes to appeal adverse rulings on eligibility and other questions to binding arbitration.

Both the amendment and the bill are scheduled for Senate action Tuesday.

"My objection is that it plays favorites," Fagan said. "It is not effective and it does not bring into arbitration athletes involved in international competition."

"Cook talks about the rights of athletes but he forgets that the institutions must have some type of committment to the sports programs.

"The Cook amendment would give college athletes an exemption from their committments," he said.

Fagan predicted the Cook amendment would not be tacked on to the Senate bill, a measure which would call for an investigation of the U.S. Olympic Committee and sports charters, among other provisions.

Indians beat Halos again

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

ANAHEIM — Dick Williams is now 0-6 as the manager of the Angels, but the new skipper isn't pounding the walls with his fists or slamming chairs down on the floor.

Even with the terrible start he is undergoing at Anaheim, Williams is remaining cordial, cool and optimistic.

The Angels lost another tough one Saturday night in a 1-0 defeat at the hands of the amazing Cleveland Indians. But Williams saw only good things in the narrow loss.

When the writers arrived at Williams' office, he was bubbling about the pitching of Ed Figueroa plus the new infield defense of shortstop Orlando Ramirez and third baseman Dave Chalk.

"This was encouraging," Williams exclaimed. "Figueroa pitched great — just great. And didn't our shortstop look great? He means a great deal to our defense.

Figueroa, who came out of the bullpen to make his first major league start, held the hard-hitting Indians to six singles while allowing four walks and striking out six.

"We didn't expect Figueroa to go nine innings," Williams said. "We were just hoping for six or seven. But he was strong at the end. Ellie (Rodriguez) said he really threw well in the ninth."

Ramirez, who was called up from the Angels' Salt Lake City Farm Club in the Pacific Coast League earlier Saturday in exchange for relief pitcher Barry Raziano, went right to work Saturday night. He played a flawless game at shortstop and drew a walk in three trips to the plate.

"He sure didn't look scared out there for a new kid," Williams said, "and you people haven't seen him at his best yet. Chalk helps our play at third. The move is permanent as far as we're concerned."

Ramirez, who had a reputation as an outstanding fielder, hit .341 in 24 games at Salt Lake City. He is the first native of Colombia, the South American nation, to make it to the major leagues.

But while Williams was happy with the pitching and new defense, the results were still the same monotonous thing.

Cleveland's Dick Bosman, who entered the game, with a 5.67 earned run average, and reliever Tom Buskey stopped the Halos with four hits in an impressive pitching performance.

No, the American League East standings are not a typo.

The Indians are really one game in front of the pack in first place in the East. If the miracle of Lake Erie continues, the Tribe should send a thank you note to Anaheim. Cleveland is now 8-0 over the Angels this season.

The biggest play of the game came in the sixth inning when the Angels made their biggest threat after Ramirez drew his walk and Mickey Rivers had a bad-hop single.

Chalk moved Ramirez to third on a fielder's choice grounder. With one out, Bosman got Lee Stanton to ground into a double play with Chalk knocking second baseman Jack Brohamer to the ground. The Cleveland second sacker came up ready to fight but cooled heads prevailed.

Joe Lahoud hit a one-out double in the seventh, but Buskey came out of the bullpen to retire John Doherty and Denny Doyle to get out of the jam.

Buskey then retired the Angels in order through the eighth and ninth frames to record his sixth save of the season.

Cleveland's only run— which proved to be enough — came across in the fourth when Oscar Gamble singled, stole second and came home on Buddy Bell's hit.

Cleveland was denied a second run in the seventh when Stanton's throw nipped pinch-runner Rusty Torres at the plate when he tried to score on John Lowenstein's single.

"We had our opportunities," Williams said. "It was just one of those things."

Asked if there are more moves contemplated, Williams answered briskly, "Yes."

After being questioned about which positions, may be affected general manager Harry Dalton chipped in, "The whole team."

ANGEL ANGLES — Jim Perry (7-7), the least celebrated of the brothers combination, will hurl for the Indians against Frank Tanana (4-12) in today's 2 p.m. finale of the series.

Gaylord Perry will try for his 16th consecutive victory — an American League record — Monday night at Oakland.

Baltimore comes in Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings with the probable pitching rotation being Doyle Alexander, Mike Cuellar and Ross Grimsley. As a reminder, Wednesday's game starts at 6 p.m.

The Angels have lost 13 of their last 15 games and 26 of 34. Both the Halo message board and the public address announcer urged the fans to vote for Frank Robinson, Chalk and Sandy Alomar for the All-Star team. Can anyone explain why anyone would vote for Alomar?

The biggest cheer from the 9,317 fans Saturday was for Washington Redskins coach George Allen, who attended the game while on a short "vacation" in Southern Calif.

Pitchers star at Upland

UPLAND — Some of 1974's finest high school pitchers were at work in the Upland 14th Annual American Legion Baseball Tournament Saturday, much to the regret of rival batters.

Pomona Post 30 ace Larry Pekarcik won two games over the course of the day's action to pitch his team into the championship semi-finals. Pekarcik beat rugged Redlands Post 650 7-3 in the morning game Saturday and came back against Montclair Post 616 to toss 2 and 1-3rd scoreless relief frames as Post 30 nipped Post 616 6-4 in nine innings.

Ontario Post 112 stayed alive in the consolation bracket, as their Larry Garcia fired a one-hit shutout at host team Upland Post 73, ousting them 2-0.

Pekarcik put on a one-man show in the contest with Redlands, as he fanned eight in four innings for the win and also clubbed a home run and double.

Redlands, leaders in District 25 Legion play, did touch up Pekarcik for two runs but Post 30 scored three times in the opening inning off of Fred Smith and were never headed.

Rubin Ruiz, with three innings of relief work, saved the win for Pekarcik while Will LeWallen joined Pekarcik on the extra-base list with two doubles.

Post 616, who had won their opener 6-1 Saturday over West Covina as Don Pierce tossed a nine-hitter, took a 4-1 lead against the Gems after four innings.

But a clutch two-out, bases-loaded double by Roger Slayton scored three in the fifth to tie it up.

Pekarcik tallied the tieing run as he ran through the third base coach's stop sign and slid in ahead of cutoff man Pat Proulx's throw.

Things stayed knotted at 4-4 until the ninth. In that frame Montclair starter Mike Mederios weakened, and allowed a single and walk. Bruce Richardson relieved him, but the Post 30 runners moved up on a wild pitch and scored as Tracy Cowger laced a single for the winning runs.

Pekarcik, who came on with two away in the seventh, fanned four in his relief job to give him 12 K's in 6 and 1-3rd innings on the day to go with his two wins.

Ontario's Garcia garnered the rest of the hurling headlines, as he outdueled Upland's Frank Pastore for the win. Dan Monroe reached Garcia for a first-inning single, the only safety off of the Post 112 lefty.

Ontario had only three hits off of Pastore, but two Upland errors and a steal of home by George Bjorkman were cashed in for the two scores.

Chino Post 299 won their morning game 12-6 over South Pasadena Post 140, but were ousted in the nightcap Saturday 3-2 by Tri-City Legion.

Tri-City, who had whipped LaPuente Legion 11-3 earlier in the day, now advances in the championship bracket against Arcadia Post 247 today at 5:30 p.m. at Memorial Park.

Arcadia beat Rowland Legion 5-2 and outslugged Covina Post 207 14-6 to reach the semis. Dave Hostetler bombed a 500-foot homer in Arcadia's win over Covina.

Earlier in the day Covina had outclassed San Gabriel 17-0 as Dave Garnier tossed a one-hitter.

Rowland stayed alive in the consolation bracket by beating San Gabriel 9-4. The Blues will meet La Puente, a 8-7 winner over South Pasadena, today. The other consolation contest on tap for Memorial Park today will pit Redlands against Ontario.

Redlands-Ontario go on at 11:30 a.m. with Rowland-LaPuente playing at 2 p.m.

Post 30 will square off at 8 p.m. tonight against Claremont, a winner in Saturday night's late tourney contest. Either Mark Lambert or Paul Madrigal will start for the Gems, with Pekarcik ready to go again in relief if needed.

Squad cutdown for Hawaiians

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — The Hawaiians of the new World Football League trimmed their squad to 50 players Saturday in preparation for their season opener next Wednesday against the Florida Blazers in Orlando.

Four players were placed on waivers by the Hawaiians, who have been training at UC Riverside. They were Roc Pamplin, a running back from the University of Hawaii; J.D. Smith, a running back from UC Berkeley; Fred Leathers, a wide receiver from Berkeley; and Walter Odles, a wide receiver from the University of Washington.

"We've got some real talent on this team," said Coach Mike Giddings. "We're the youngest team in terms of experience, but after five weeks of double sessions in 100-degree temperature I know they're a hungry group."

Aztecs dumped by Dallas, 3-0

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — The Dallas Tornados, with a new attack that does not include last year's stars Ilija Mitic and Kyle Rote Jr., whipped the Los Angeles Aztecs Saturday night 3-0 in the North American Soccer League.

Rote and Mitic had scored only once between them this season after gathering 22 goals together last year and coach Ron Newman announced Friday night he would bench them in favor of Mike Renshaw and North Dallas High School product Frederico Garcia.

Tommy Gore scored the Tornado's first goal on a penalty kick awarded when Ramone Miraldo knocked Renshaw down. Garcia scored a second with :02 left in the first half and Mitic, in as a substitute, scored the third in the last half with an assist from Renshaw.

The win put the Tornados back into first place in the Central Division.

THREE-POINT LANDING — Russia's Viktor Saneyev finds his not so soft landing a little "hair-raising" as he competes in long jump in USSR-USA track and field meet. USA lost to USSR.

GMO title to Ed Sneed

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Ed Sneed matched an eagle by his closest challenger with one of his own on the same hole minutes later Saturday to propel him to victory and a $26,000 prize in the Greater Milwaukee Open.

Sneed, 29, led the $130,000 GMO from the first round, when he fired a six-under par 66, to the finish. He increased his lead each day en route to his second championship in six years on the tour.

The Ohio State University graduate, who still lives in Columbus, Ohio, shot a par 72 in the final round to finish at 276, 12 under par and four shots ahead of Grier Jones, who made a belated charge at the lead.

Jones had a 71 Saturday for 280 and $14,820. Bob Zender, Dave Hill and Chuck Courtney tied for third at 281 for $6,890 each. Zender slipped to a 73 in the final round while Courtney fired a 69.

Sneed had won only $14,623 on the tour so far this year and stood 92nd on the money list after finishing 40th with $67,990 in 1973. His only other victory was the Kaiser International last year.

His victory here pushes his earnings to $40,623 and lifts him into the top 50.

Sneed carried a four-stroke lead over Zender and Hill going into the final round, and both Zender and Hill bogeyed the first hole.

But Sneed bogeyed the second hole and four holes later found himself fighting off a challenge by Jones who started the day five strokes off the pace.

Jones eagled the par five, 524-yard sixth hole to pull to within two strokes of the lead and it began to look like a two-man race.

But Sneed, playing in the final threesome behind Jones, came along minutes later to eagle the same hole. Jones birdied the next hole but bogeyed the ninth and Sneed still held a four stroke lead at the turn.

When Jones bogeyed the 10th hole, it was all but over.

Sneed needed only to keep close to par the rest of the way, riding his success earlier in the tournament to victory. He backed up his first round 66 with a 67 in the second round and a 71 on Friday over the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course.

Tommy Aaron, Lee Trevino and Larry Hinson all finished at 282, six under par and six strokes behind Sneed before a record GMO gallery of 20,121. Attendance for the week was 54,361, also a GMO record.

Sneed said his eagle was "the turning point for me" even though he was unaware Jones had just eagled the same hole to pull within two strokes of him.

"I felt like that was a big relief," he said. "I was tight today, it was just the pressure."

He said he didn't check the leader board until he made the turn "and saw I was 13-under. When I got my par on 16 I knew I had a six stroke lead with two holes to go and then I got careless."

He wound up with bogeys on both 17 and 18 but it was after the fact.

"I had never been in that position before and there was just a letdown," he said, fingering the $26,000 check.

"I'm more excited about this win than the Kaiser win last year," he said. "That (the Kaiser) was a breakthrough for me but I've played poorly since then and this gives me lots of confidence."

It was only the second time this year anyone on the tour led after all four rounds.

"It was his tournament, all right," said Jones. "The rest of us were playing for second.

USSR wins track meet

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — The United States got meet record performances from Rick Wohlhuter, Dick Buerkle, and Mary Decker along with a third triumph from Reggie Jones Saturday but it was not enough as the Soviet Union, paced by Lyudmila Bragiana's 3,000-meters world record, came out on top 192-184 in their 12th dual track and field meet.

The U.S. men managed to win their competition 117-102 but could not overcome the Soviets' margin built by their powerful women's squad, which won the female competition 90-37. It was the USSR's ninth combined victory in the history of the event against two losses and one tie, while the U.S. men posted their ninth triumph and the American girls lost for the 11th time.

The biggest round of applause from the near-capacity crowd of 38,500 at Duke University's Wallace Wade Stadium, went to Miss Bragiana, only 17 days shy of her 31st birthday, who smashed her own world record for the women's 3,000 meters by three-tenths of a second with a time of 8:52.7.

"The applause, it helped," said Miss Bragiana, a physical education instructor who looked a sight, with her hair stringy and wet from the intermittent rain which fell during the meet. "I knew in the last 200 meters I had the record."

Wohlhuter, a 25-year-old insurance adjuster from Chicago, set all his own pace in winning the mens' 800 meters in 1:44.0, only one-tenth of a second above his American record and three-tenths of a second over the world mark held by Italy's Marcello Fiasconaro.

"I felt if I got past the first quarter all right, I was doing well," said Wohlhuter, who also added he had not planned on going for the world record.

Buerkle, a 26-year-old high school teacher, from Rochester, N.Y., ran the second fastest 5,000 meters ever by an American, clocking 13:26.1. Steve Prefontaine holds the American mark of 13:22.4.

Jones, the 20-year-old freshman speedster from the University of Tennessee, uncorked a blazing finish to nip teammate Mark Lutz and Olympic champion Valery Borzov in the 200 meter dash in 20.8. On Friday, Jones had won the 100 meter dash and anchored the mens' winning 440 yard relay. His victory Saturday enabled the U.S. to continue its streak of never having lost the mens' 200 meters.

"I was looking bad on the curve," said Jones, "and I had to fight back a little bit. I knew I was going to have to put out."

Miss Decker, the 15-year-old 99-pound wonder from Garden Grove, Calif., lost the lead midway through the stretch of the womens' 800 meters to her Soviet opponent, but rallied in the final 10 yards to win in 2:02.3, snapping her own meet record of 2:02.9.

"I really didn't have a race planned, I just decided I was going to run the best I could," said the West Coast teenager.

Olivares insisting he still has power

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Ruben Olivares, the most powerful punching bantamweight in history and second only to Rocky Marciano in his rate of KOs, insists he still hits as devastatingly as ever.

And he has a simple explanation for training for the first time in his nine-year career at a remote desert camp miles away from the night-club circuit of the big city.

The reformed playboy from Mexico City wants to be the first ex-bantamweight king to capture the featherweight title since Harry Jeffra did it in 1940.

"When I was bantamweight champion I never trained this hard for one fight," said the 26-year-old Olivares, who gets his first crack at the 126-pound World Boxing Association crown Tuesday night. "I want the satisfaction of holding two titles. It's the biggest thing to me. It would be the biggest thing to anybody."

Olivares takes on Japan's Zensuke Utagawa in a scheduled 15-rounder at the Forum for the WBA featherweight championship left vacant when former champion Ernesto Marcel of Panama retired. Olivares lost the bantamweight title when his countryman, Rafael Herrera, knocked him out in the 14th round in 1972.

In a few days, he gets to find out if his desert training camp exile was worth it. Olivares spent nearly six weeks at Gilman Hot Springs before the 110 degree temperatures forced him to a downtown Los Angeles gym. He was already down to 124 pounds.

Olivares, who calls Los Angeles his second home, is one of boxing's greatest punchers ever. His 73-4-1 record includes an incredible 66 KOs. Only Marciano, a heavyweight, had a greater percentage of knockouts with 43 in 49 bouts.

In earning a 5-1 record as a featherweight — unable to make the 118-pound bantam limit any longer—Olivares looked vulnerable against tough Nova Scotian Art Hafey. Hafey knocked out Olivares in Mexico City and lost a return bout at the Forum by a narrow decision only because Olivares stayed outside and outboxed him.

Utagawa, the 24-year-old Japanese and Oriental champion from Tokyo, is actually the WBA's top ranked featherweight contender. Olivares is No. 2.

The slightly built Japanese, who turned to boxing because he was not big enough to play professional baseball, is, however, relatively unknown outside the Orient. In compiling a 35-2 record with 10 KOs, Utagawa has fought only four times outside of Japan, all in the Orient.

But he isn't concerned about records and reputations.

"Until we actually square off," said Utagawa, who says he will go for a knockout, "odds don't mean anything —whether I'm an underdog or a favorite. It's just a matter of who controls the fight. If I can fight my fight, all the other things won't matter."

A live gate of $150,000 is expected for the bout, which would increase Olivares' total in-person box-office draw in 15 fights at the Forum to close to $3 million.

Shintaro Uchiyama, Japan's bantamweight champion, fights Carlos Zarate of Mexico City in a scheduled 10-round preliminary.

Also on the card in scheduled 10-rounders are bantamweights Alfonso Zamora of Mexico City against Favio Barcena, Gardena, Calif., and featherweights Carlos Mimila of Mexico City against Diego Martinez of Guadalajara, Mexico.

Poland stuns Brazil, 1-0, in World Cup

MUNICH, Germany (UPI) — Unheralded Poland deflated Brazil's punctured pride still further Saturday, defeating the deposed champions 1-0 to capture third place in the World Soccer Cup Finals.

A 75th minute goal by the tournament's leading scorer, Grzegorz Lato, settled the issue in favor of the Olympic Champions who won their gold medals at the same Olympic stadium two years ago.

As an aperitif for today's final between West Germany and Holland, Saturday's game had little sparkle.

The match lacked passion and both sides obviously found it hard to build up mentally after the psychological let-down of losing their previous games for a place in that final.

The Olympic stadium echoed to derisive jeers and boos as players of both sides made the most elementary errors. Just when it looked as if the fans were to suffer extra time, Lato became the hero of the day with his winning goal.

Three-way tie for lead in LPGA tournament

GRAND ISLAND, N.Y. (UPI) — Hot-shooting Jo Anne Carner shot a one-under-par 72 and Sue Roberts hit a blazing 69 to establish a three-way tie at three-under par 143 with first-round leader Murle Breer Saturday in the second round of the $35,000 LPGA Niagara Frontier Classic.

Miss Roberts, who has never finished better than sixth on the lady's golf tour, shot the best round of the tourney to recover from a first-day 74.

Mrs. Carner, who won three events and finished second twice in her last seven tournaments, came in with an erratic 72 for her share of the lead. Mrs. Breer, who had a 70 the first day, barely hung on with a par 73.

Pam Barnett, and Jo Ann Prentice, were two strokes behind the leaders for fourth place at 145.

Miss Roberts, 25, of Columbus, Ohio, had six birdies and only two bogies on the sunny and hot River Oaks Golf Course off the Niagara River mid-way between Buffalo and Niagara Falls. She sank a number of birdie putts, including a 25-footer "over the elephants" at the sixth hole.

Mrs. Carner, 35, of Lake Worth, Fla., had four bogies and a double bogey but made up for her errors with three birdies and two eagles — including a 75-foot putt she sank on the eighth hole.

Mrs. Breer, 35, of St. Petersburg, Fla., eagled one hole and birdied another, but had to settle for par when she bogied three holes. She had a par three on the seventh hole, which she aced during the first round.

Chris Repasky, 24, of Lakeland, Fla., had to withdraw from the tournament when she hit a rock with her club on the second hole and injured her right arm. A doctor told her she would probably be out a week.

Valley courses ratings updated

By PHIL ROCHE
P-B Staff Writer

Recently we checked out ratings for golf courses in this area. It's interesting to know just how the experts rate our courses. All ratings are from the regular tees. To find championship ratings, generally add two strokes. Here they are: Diamond Bar, 70.5; Marshall Canyon, 67.5; Mountain Meadows, 33 (nine holes), Azusa Greens, 67.6; Glendora C.C., 69.1; Ontario National 68.3; San Dimas Canyon, 68.2; Los Serranos South, 67.8; Los Seranos North, 69.3; Pomona National (North and east), 67.4; (North and South, 66.3 (East and South) 67.1; Red Hill C.C. 69.4; Via Verde, 70.4.

For Los Serranos South, add a bundle of strokes for the championship tees and it adds up to 72.2, a good test for anyone, as golfers who play that course know. It rates as the toughest in the area from the blue tees.

Mission Viejo (often called Mission Impossible) will be the site of the Southern California PGA tourney July 18-21. That course plays at a challenging 73.5 from the championship tees.

This tournament brings together the standout playing pros in Southern California, but there won't be many 68s or 67s at Mission Viejo. A fellow we hope to see do well is Jimmy Powell, friendly pro at Via Verde who rates as one of the classiest players in these parts.

When should a youngster start playing golf? Our answer is as soon as possible, but don't push too hard. Pat Patton out at Claremont Golf Course puts together a nice 4-week series of lessons for youngsters. They're low pressure, one-hour sessions designed to build a good swing.

Funny how so manny fathers of boys playing baseball wake up one day and say, "Gee, I wished I'd given my kid a chance to learn golf when he was about 10." Nothing wrong with baseball, but golf may be the answer for a youngster who's not interested in hitting a moving ball.

Out at sporty Palm Lake in Pomona, the Men's Club will hold this month's tournament on Saturday and Sunday, July 27-28. Doc Backer and Nels Gustafson won the blind partner, low tournament in June.

Finishing in a tie for second were the teams of Reed Hays-Archie Robinson and Tom Conway-Tim Kresin.

Mrs. Helen Miller recently won the Red Hill Country Club championship for 1974. It was the sixth time that Mrs. Miller walked off with top honors. A 10-handicapper, she averaged a sparkling 83 for her four rounds. She's been a resident of Pomona for 26 years. In 1970 she won the Southern Calfironia Seniors championship and the par 3 championship . . . Congratulations Mrs. Miller.

Finishing second at Red Hill was Mrs. Judy Johnston of Ontario, and Mrs. Betty Olson of Cucamonga was third.

We haven't played Red Hill for several years, but it must be rated as one of the top clubs in this area . . . challenging and well kept.

Coming event . . . The Claremont-Montclair chapter, City of Hope, will sponsor its annual tourney next Saturday and Sunday (July 13-14) at Claremont Golf Course. For a 50-cent donation, golfers can try their luck at a hole-in-one or belt the ball into a circle for prizes. The event will be conducted from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and the winner will receive a gift certificate on the final day.

The project is being conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Williams, who are assisted by members of the chapter. All proceeds go to the City of Hope Medical Center, Duarte . . . Surely a worthwhile event for swingers.

Shooting a two under par 70, Gark Backlund of the Calabasas Park Country Club won low gross in the Los Angeles area qualifying round for the United Staes Junior Amateur Golf Championships at the California C.C.

HELEN MILLER
. . . Red Hills champ

The national tourney will be held July 23-27 at the Brooklawn C.C. in Fairfield, Connecticut.

The five others to quality for the nationals were Chino's Len Stone of Western Hills, Brett Hullin of Canyon Crest C.C., and Robert Blum of Los Coyotes who had 73's, and Dave Games of Long Beach Recreation golf club and Jon Levin of Braemar C.A. who had 74's.

Southern California amateur golfers are invited to take to the links at Mission Viejo on Tuesday, July 16, with well-known professionals Jerry Barber, former National PGA champion, winner of the Tournament of Champions and member of the Ryder Cup Team for six straight years; Pat Rielly, Southern California PGA section "Professional of the Year," and Via Verde's Jimmy Powell, former Southern PGA section champion.

Several berths are still available for amateurs in the pro-am, to be held just prior to the 50th anniversary tournament of the southern section, which will be staged July 17 through 21. Both events will be held at the Mission Viejo golf course, just off the San Diego Freeway in southern Orange County.

Deadline for amateur entries is Friday, July 12. Details on the pro-am and the sectional tournament are available at any Southern California PGA pro shop.

A total of $2,560 in prizes has been set aside for the pro-am according to Gene McCaulitf, tournament director. Amateur participants will receive a warmup jacket bearing the emblem of the 50th anniversary tournament, along with their cart and green fees. A party will be held at the Mission Viejo Country Club after the event, during which the prize money will be distributed. The fee for amateur players is $55.

Out at Los Serranos the Women's Championship tournament was won by Betty Hallum who defended her 1973 title by shooting 240 during the three-day event.

Runner-up was Mary takanabe (261) and first low net was Opal Hall with 217.

Low gross winner for the first flight was Dixie Thompson (288). First low net was won by Lorene Stone (228), and second place went to Ada Dunne (231).

Jean Morris (306) won the second flight low gross. Betty Giannos (224) and Marjorie Graham (230) finished one-two in low net. Consolation flight winner was Charlotte Hansen who shot a fine 92.

Chip Shots . . . Los Angeles Men's City Golf Championship gets under way Saturday and Sunday at Griffith Park, Rancho and Sepulveda golf courses . . . Many players from this area are entered . . . We'll try to let you know how they do . . . Congratulations are in order to John Johnson and his crew out at Azusa Greens . . . The course is in excellent shape these days, and it's a great test of golf. General manager there is Ron Taylor, and he's ably assisted by Bob Garcia and Vince Welch . . . High school-age players this summer are again playing county courses for $1 on weekdays from 12 noon on.

DiMaggio has memories

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sometimes, after a man has been away awhile and he hears the old neighborhood has changed, he gets this almost compulsive urge to go back home again.

Possibly that, more than anything else, would explain why Joe DiMaggio was perfectly oblivious to the fact his stylish black leather loafers were getting full of mud while he stood there gazing all around him in what used to be center field at partially dismantled, gradually being remodeled Yankee Stadium.

"I'm not a sentimentalist," said Joe DiMaggio, maybe kidding himself a little, "but I've sure got a lotta memories of this place."

On this particular visit, Joe D. saw Yankee Stadium as he had never ever seen it before. He saw huge mounds of dirt piled up in the outfield....He saw the infield torn apart so that the base lines no longer were visible....Part of the bleacher wall was gone and a sizeable section of the field removed behind home plate....Bulldozers and trucks were everywhere.....Sparks from the welders' torches kept floating down from the mezzanine level

Joe DiMaggio saw Yankee Stadium as a shell, a shell of what it will be following a $45 million refurbishing job, which, supposedly, will convert it into "the greatest stadium ever built" when it reopens in April of 1976.

"It looks more massive to me now than when it was complete," said Joe D., whose name became a synonym for center field during the 13 years he patrolled it for the New York Yankees.

Standing out there again now, he looked up toward the third deck from which the roof had been removed.

"Hey, Joe-e-e-e-e!" called down one construction worker from the top deck, instantly recognizing the man who five years ago was voted The Greatest Living Baseball Player. "You coming back here to play baseball again?"

Joe DiMaggio laughed.

"No," he said, waving his hand at the man. "Just visiting."

Sure-footed as ever, DiMaggio avoided the deep puddles in the outfield caused by rain and made his way over to the famed marble monuments of Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and Miller Huggins at the foot of the centerfield flagpole. A wooden shield has been placed in front of them for protection.

"This is where I caught the ball (Hank) Greenberg hit," DiMaggio said to Perry Green, Director of the Yankee Stadium Project, UPI photographer Harry Leder and myself.

"I was no more than five feet away from these monuments, which as I remember, are 463 feet from home plate. When I caught the ball by extending my hand as far as I could, like this," DiMaggio said holding out his left hand. "I lost my presence of mind. I forgot it was only one out. I thought there were two out, and this made it three out. (Frank) Crosetti came yelling for the ball. Rudy York was on first. I saw Greenberg a week or so ago in Las Vegas and he talked to me about the catch. He said he never thought I'd ever catch that ball. I told him neither did I...."

Nearly completely gray now and more distinguished looking than ever, Joe DiMaggio is in good shape both physically and financially.

He weighs barely five pounds more than he did when he set his record for hitting in 56 straight games in the summer of 1941 and he plays golf every chance he gets. He makes appearances for charity now and then, and as for keeping body and soul together, don't worry about him. They'll never have to run a benefit for Joe DiMaggio because moneywise, he's doing even better now than he ever did with the Yankees, making television commercials for the Bowery Savings Bank and for Mr. Coffee, a coffeemaking unit.

The commercials have turned out so well that Joe D. is enjoying something of a rebirth with the younger generation.

More than 20 years have gone by since his retirement from the Yankees, but Joe Di Maggio still gets as many, if not more, requests for his autograph today than Arnold Palmer, Muhammad Ali, or Robert Redford—all of whom still happen to be working at their trades.

He has a way of bringing a degree of joy to everybody—to fathers, who saw him play and still identify with him; to their sons, who have read about him and heard stories from their fathers, and even to the women, who remember him as the man with whom the late Marilyn Monroe always said she was happiest.

On this visit to Yankee Stadium, the kids came out of nowhere to get his autograph. Patiently, he signed for every last one of them.

That did it.

Now the construction workers, all of them wearing their hard hats, wanted his signature, too. They came at Joe DiMaggio from every direction....10...25...50 in an unending stream. Everybody wanted his autograph, and they gave him everything to sign, from scraps of paper to engagement pictures, salary checks and five dollar bills.

"They're coming out of the woodwork," said Perry Green, "but it's good for the morale of these fellows. The company may have lost an hour or so, but now that these fellows have seen Joe DiMaggio, they'll probably work harder. Human nature is funny."

"Who ever expected to see Joe DiMaggio here, on a construction job?" said one of them, Larry Rosselli, a mechanical engineer.

"Why wouldn't you expect to see him here?" put in Ralph Rillero, another engineer. "This is where he belongs, isn't it? He looks like he never really left."

Long Beach gets Dulich

LONG BEACH — Long Beach State, attempting to come back from a 1-9-1 season last fall, will have two welcome additions for 1974.

Quarterback Bob Dulich from the University of San Diego and punter John Wagner from Los Angeles City College have announced that they will be attending Long Beach State this fall.

Dulich, 5-10, 178, will be a senior transfer from San Diego, where he led the Toreros to a 9-2-1 record in 1973. He passed from 2,538 yards, hitting on 164 of 294 attempts for 55.8 per cent, ran for 235 yards, passed for 21 touchdowns, and averaged 231.2 yards per game in total offense. He paced the NCAA Division III in five individual statistical categories and was fifth in another.

Ready or not, football loop makes its debut this week

Now the "only game in town" because the National Football League players are on strike, the new league hopes to get some quick attention when it opens a 20-game season—no exhibitions—this week.

Five games are set for Wednesday night and a nationally televised game—New York at Jacksonville—completes the first week of action on Thursday night.

The 12-team league has had more than its share of problems getting underway and most of its big-name players—like Larry Csonka, Paul Warfield and Jim Kiick—won't be able to join until next season.

But the new league has made rapid strides in the last six months and now the main question is whether the fans will pay to watch the teams in person—or even bother to watch on TV.

The number of season tickets sold is open to some question since some of the claims aren't verified. The Birmingham team first claimed it had sold 20,000 season tickets but then backtracked and admitted it sold only about a third of that amount.

The league promoters insist they're farther along than the AFL was in 1960. Babe Parilli, who played on the Oakland team that year and is now the coach of the New York Stars, says, "I'd say right now with the players I've got, this club could have beaten my old Oakland team by 40 points."

The league is the brainchild of Gary Davidson, the smoothtalking promoter who helped found the ABA and the WHA.

Davidson is the president of the league and also is said to have cleared $700,000 when he sold the Philadelphia franchise so he seems to be ahead of the game regardless of how the league fares.

His major gamble is that the U.S. football fan is ready to watch football in mid-week. He insists there's no problem of too much football on TV although a few housewives may give him an argument on that.

If the league survives, one of the first items the players are going to complain about is the schedule. It looks as if it were drawn out of a hat.

The New York team, for example, plays five games in an 18-day span. And since Honolulu plays its games on Sunday while the rest of the teams play in the middle of the week, the teams have some incredible road trips.

For example, on Wednesday night, Aug. 21, Hawaii plays at Memphis and Jacksonville hosts Birmingham. Less than four days later, Sunday afternoon, August 25th, Jacksonville and Hawaii play in Honolulu. And this isn't an isolated incident.

It's difficult to say which teams will be the best ones—especially since there have been no exhibition games, only some scrimmages—but the league's publicity directors are touting Birmingham and Southern California.

In the first five games Wednesday night, Portland is at Philadelphia, Hawaii is at Florida, Southern California is at Birmingham, Houston is at Chicago and Detroit is at Memphis.

The regular season will wind up on Nov. 13 with the three division champions and the best second place team entering the playoffs. The championship game is set for the day after Thanksgiving.

League officials hope for wide-open, high-scoring games to contrast with the conservative, low-scoring NFL.

But the important score for the new league will be on the bottom line of the ledger. Without a huge TV contract (each team gets less than $100,000 in TV revenue compared to $2 million for the NFL clubs), the teams are going to lose money.

The question is how much they will lose and how much they can they afford to lose. And how much football will the fans watch on TV?

The answers to those questions will determine the fate of the new league.

Wilkes waiting to be 'killed'

OAKLAND (UPI) — Just as soon as Keith Wilkes gets killed, he'll sign a Golden State Warriors contract.

That's the word from Warrior General Manager Dick Vertlieb, who explained Monday that the 6-7 UCLA All America forward is busy these days in a film called "The Open Man."

But the character he plays dies in a day or two and Vertlieb expressed confidence that he can then negotiate with Wilkes and get the top draft pick's signature on a Warrior contract.

Undefeated colt

Tiny's Gay, the undefeated 2-year-old colt who won both the Tumbleweed and Bay Meadows Futurityes and more than $80,000 in half a dozen starts, was purchased for $3,000 in last year's All-American Sale at Ruidoso Downs, N. M. Tiny's Gay is nominated to the $75,000-added Kindergarten Stakes, scheduled at Los Alamitos for August 3.

Bowl to hold low-priced music program

HOLLYWOOD — The Los Angeles Philharmonic will present a six-hour marathon of music associated with Paris in the Hollywood Bowl starting at 6 p.m. July 17. All seats are $2.

Guest artists are pianists Misha and Cipa Dichter and actress Rohan McCullough.

Lukas Foss, a guiding force in the marathons since their inception in 1971, will again be in charge, conducting the orchestra in such diverse works as Mozart's Symphony No. 31 in D ("Paris") and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2.

The evening will begin with Fanfares by Lully, and then move on to such solo and ensemble works as Debussy's "Suite Bergamasque" (Misha Dichter), the Debussy-Boulez "Chansons de Bilitis" (Rohan McCullough and ensemble) and Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" (the Dichters, pianos, Miss McCullough reciting the Ogden Nash verses).

Suite for Violin, Clarinet and Piano by Darius Milhaud will be played in memory of the French composer who died June 22.

LOS ANGELES — The Moiseyev Dance Company, popular folkloric ensemble from the Soviet Union, will give seven performances in Shrine Auditorium starting Agu. 13.

First introduced to American audiences in 1958 by impresario S. Hurok, the company of dancers, singers and musicians was a hit in this country and immediately established themselves as a favorite.

Highlight of the Moiseyev program for this fifth tour is the Polovetsian Dances from "Prince Igor," a work using the Borodin opera score as well as its Act II setting—the Cossack camp of Polovtsy. Based on the lore of that period which is full of tales of daring and horsemanship, the choreography of Igor Moiseyev exposes a spectacular variety of dancing techniques. Elements include "on pointe" dancing in leather boots, aballetic figures executed in mid-air, high jumps and dervish whirls and mass dancing.

Also new to the West will be "Festival in Kirghiz," a group of dances from the central and southernmost republics of the USSR. In this set are an Uzbek "balance" dance inspired by the antics of a salesman in the bazaars of Tashkent, some Bakshirian sketches from that province noted for its sinuous rhythms and melodies, and comic numbers suggested by the courting customs of the countryside.

Among the old favorites will be "Zhok," that speediest of all Moiseyev numbers, from Moldavia; the romantic "Dance of the Bessarabian Gypsies"; old country dances from the past, and the Moseyev trademark, "Partisans," in which the entire company "rides" into battle on horseback.

Mail orders are now being accepted for the Moiseyev performances through Variety Concerts, Suite 722, 427 W. Fifth St., Los Angeles 90013.

Sawdust festival set at Laguna July 12

LAGUNA BEACH — The eighth annual Sawdust Festival, including exhibitions and demonstrations by more than 160 handcraft artists, will be held across the street from the Laguna Beach Festival of Arts, running concurrently with that program Friday through Aug. 25.

On display will be macrame, ceramics, jewelry, sculpture, tapestry work, silver, woodcarving, leatherwork and paintings in a wide range of media. Wandering musicians and musical groups will entertain, and refreshment booths will be manned by festival members.

A greatly expanded and unusual Garden Gallery for the fine arts also will be on view since many painters are enthusiastic about exhibiting along with the handcraft arts.

A waterfall tumbles from the rock ledges at the back of the big eucalyptus grove, and a brook was added last season.

When the Sawdust Festival purchased the grove for its home two years ago, members tore down and removed old buildings on the property, and have planted many more trees and shrubs to enhance an already pastoral atmosphere.

An additional 70 parking spaces adjacent to the grounds will be available this season. Open air trams trundle from the festival to town. Admission to the festival is 25 cents.

International art on view at museum

LOS ANGELES — "The International Art Exhibition," 38 contemporary works of painting, paper collage, sculpture, tapestry and stained glass, is now on view in the Applied Arts Gallery of the California State Museum of Science and Industry in Exposition Park. The show continues through Aug. 25.

The exhibit, representing 30 countries, was commissioned by International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. as part of its first global advertisting campaign. Los Angeles is the third stop on a 10-city tour of the United States and Canada.

Each of the 38 participating artists was asked to interpret in his or her own medium a particular service, product or contribution that ITT has made to that artist's country. The resulting work and accompanying statement by the artists were then used in a variety of international publications.

Although nearly all of the artists reprsented are well known in their own countries, only a few have achieved international status.

The works include Mexican artist Fernando Belain's oil on canvas, "Spirit of the Past and Present"; Scottish artist Gerald Laing's woven tapestry, "Sculpture in a Landscape"; Belgium artist Herman Muys' stained glass "Electronics: Images and Symbols", and Singapore artist Chieu Shuey Fook's aluminum relief," Demon Fish".

The museum is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Studs Terkel

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Studs Terkel's thing is making books out of interviews with average people. His "Hard Times" had people reminiscing about the Depression and his new one, "Working," is a compilation of people talking about their jobs and their lives.

The books are tremendously popular and successful, so naturally TV is interested. The network moguls always sniff around when something succeeds in another field, wondering if there's any way that success can be transferred to TV. And they're after good old Studs.

Their interest has been heightened because they know his background. Studs Terkel is a veteran of broadcasting. He's a Chicagoan and he was there when Chicago had its own style of television.

In those semi-good days, the Chicago style of TV created three programs which were milestones. One was Garroway-at-Large, with Dave Garroway's low pressure variety hour. Another was delightful Kukla, Fran and Ollie. And the third was Studs' Place.

Studs' Place was an imaginary restaurant. It became so popular that people used to come to Chicago and ask the taxi drivers to take them to Studs' Place.

Chicago's place in the TV sun didn't last too long.

"As soon as the networks came in," Studs says, "and realized what a tremendous advertising medium TV was, as soon as the vice-presdients took over, I knew my show was doomed. It wasn't the kind of show that sold things—it was only the kind of show the public liked."

But Studs' name became part of TV's history. He still has a very popular radio show in Chicago and that's another thing the TV brass today are interested in.

He says they've been after him to do his interview thing on TV.

"One of the late-night shows wanted to give me three minutes," he says. "I just laughed. They said maybe five minutes. I laughed some more.

"It can't be done in that short a time. It takes me a couple of hours to get people talking easily. Besides, they'd freeze up in front of a camera. I have to gain their confidence before they'll give me anything worthwhile.

"In my interviews, generally the first half-hour or three-quarters of an hour are just verbal fencing, until the subject feels comfortable. If I tried to do an interview in five minutes on TV, it wouldn't be worth a thing."

So he's turned down TV's feelers. Some other feelers, however, intrigue him. He says that playwright Arthur Miller has been trying to make a play out of sections of "Hard Times," and that would be fine. So far, however, he says that Miller's found it too big a project.

"It's defeated him," Studs says.

Folklorico ballet slated at Redlands

REDLANDS — The Ballet Folklorico Mexicano of Los Angeles will perform at the Redlands Bowl at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Admission is by free-will offering.

Director and choreographer of the company is Graciela Tapia, who has taken the troupe on tours of North and South America, Europe and Asia. It has received praise from numerous world leaders, including Nikita Khrushchev and Mao Tse-tung. Miss Tapia was commissioned by the Mexican government to teach dance in the United States. Her company has appeared at the Hollywood Bowl and the Los Angeles Music Center.

Indian and Western Exhibition slated at Anaheim Convention Center July 12

ANAHEIM — California craftsmen, artists and collectors will be among the 200 exhibitors at the Indian Arts and Crafts and Western Show & Sale at the Anaheim Convention Center Friday through next Sunday.

The show will feature silver-turquoise jewelry, pottery, kachina dolls, basketry, sand paintings, oil paintings and leather work of Indian and other artists.

Hundreds of pounds of silver and turquoise will include the display of what is believed to be the world's largest genuine Indian squash blossom necklace, bracelet and ring in existence and the second largest turquoise nugget. The latter will be exhibited by its owner, Donald Ward of Van Nuys.

The show will offer a unique educational opportunity for those unfamiliar with Indian and Western arts and crafts since 16 Indian craftsmen will be on duty in a centrally located section demonstrating their skills. These working craftsmen are leaders in their respective fields and their works are collected by museums as well as private collectors.

Silversmith Consuelo Hawkes of La Habra and Jesse Loco, silversmith and movie stuntman from Alhambra, will appear in the craft demonstration section. Audie Yazzie, well known Navajo sandpainter now living in Bell Gardens, will also appear.

The section of 16 master craftsmen will also include sand painter Ernest Hunt and leather craftsmen Jimmie Reyna, both of the Phoenix area; a Navajo rug weaver of Winslow, Ariz.; prize winning Hopi silversmith Lawrence Saufkie; and potters Manuel and Juanita Fragua of the Jemez Pueblo in New Mexico.

California craftsmen who are exhibiting outside the "working craftsmen's section include a number of Indian and non-Indian specialists.

Award winning oil paintings by Bill Remer well known Crestline artist will be on display. Raymond Marcos of San Marcos will show one of the finest collections of old baskets in the United States.

Grammy Award winner to perform at Farm

BUENA PARK—Country-western star Jerry Reed, winner of a Grammy Award, will perform in the John Wayne Theater of Knott's Berry Farm next Sunday through July 20.

Honored as country music's Outstanding Male Vocalist in 1970 by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences, Reed was a regular performer on CBS-TV's Glen Campbell Show.

Back-to-back best-sellers during the past two years have kept Reed near the top on the competitive country music charts.

"Good Woman's Love," currently in the top 20 of Billboard Magazine's Hot Country List, was preceded by his novel "Lord Mr. Ford."

Other Reed hits include "Amos Moses," "When You're Hot, You're Hot" and "Georgia Sunshine."

Known in country circles as "the guitar man," (after a song he wrote that became a smash hit for Elvis Presley) Reed records for RCA Records.

Knott's Wild Animal Follies, produced and hosted by Ralph Helfer of "Daktari" and "Gentle Ben" fame, features wild animals live and uncaged on stage.

Every day at Knott's.

Walk into Knott's Ghost Town and you're in the middle of a shoot 'em up showdown between a sheriff and two "funfighters".

Or sit timidly in your seat during Knott's Wild Animal Follies—while steps away panthers, brahma bulls and other beasts prowl the stage live and uncaged! A lion leaps toward you. A husky man wrestles a 500 lb. bear.

See Ghost Town "Funfighters".

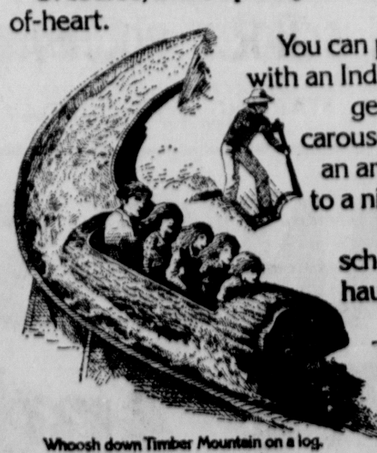
You shoot the rapids on Knott's Timber Mountain log ride—plummeting through darkened underground caverns and plunging down a rocky spillway.

Then you board a mine train to creak and clatter your way deep into the earth, making a run for the tunnel mouth as dynamite goes off behind you.

Taming of the west.

Of course, there's plenty at Knott's for the tamer-of-heart.

You can pan for gold. Chat with an Indian chief. Ride the gentle beasts on the carousel. Go for a spin in an antique auto. Listen to a nickelodian. Attend class in a little red schoolhouse. Visit the haunted shack, where water flows uphill. Tell tall tales around the pot-bellied stove in the general store. Pet a goat or llama in Knott's animal farm. Watch the Mexican folk dancers and tap your toe to the rhythm of the "guitaron".



Whoosh down Timber Mountain on a log.

Looking at Knott's.

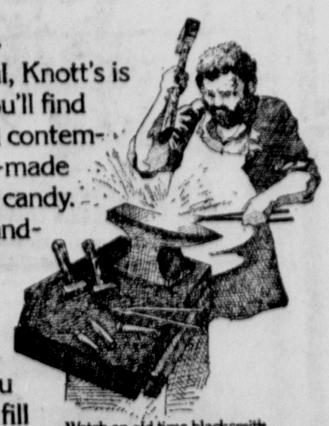
For lookers, there's a lot at Knott's that meets the eye.

Like the covered wagon shows. The mighty fireworks show. The top name talent in the Knott's John Wayne Theater. The tiny world of "Motts Miniatures". The horse drawn fire engines. The collection of carriages in the livery stable. The bottle house and the girls in Goldie's Place. The flamingoes and the peacocks and the roosters running loose. The glass blower with his bubbles and the blacksmith with his sparks and steel.

Pan for real gold.

Shop talk.

If you love the unusual, Knott's is a great place to shop. You'll find antique fire engines and contemporary cut glass. Home-made pickles and hand-made candy. Imported gowns and hand-carved leathergoods.



Watch an old time blacksmith forge horseshoes.

Eat your fill.

If you're famished at Knott's Berry Farm, you have a dozen places to fill your tummy. Best of all is Mrs. Knott's own chicken dinner restaurant. (Been bringing folks back to Knott's for 40 years.) Then there's the steak house, the cable-car kitchen and a host of snack shops. Old-fashioned hot pretzel and popcorn stands are everywhere at Knott's.

Show up at Knott's. Any day or night. You'll enjoy the wildest shows in the west...and then some.

Yank ties Russians in violin contest

MOSCOW (UPI) — Eugene Fodor of Denver, Colo., tied two Russians to win top honors recently in the violin contest at the Fifth International Tchaikovsky competition. It was the first time an American has won on the violin.

Fodor, 24, considered the United States' best violinist, shared a silver medal with Russians Ruben Agoranyan and Rudusan Gvasalia. No gold medal was awarded because no one performed well enough, said the jury, chaired by Soviet violinist David Oistrakh.

The musician played with the Denver Symphony Orchestra when he was 11. In 1972 he was the first American to win a gold medal at the Paganini competition in Genoa, Italy. He said it was there that he met Soviet violinist Galina Barinova who suggested he try the Moscow competition.

An active concert performer who trained at Indiana University and who plays with the leading American symphony orchestras, Fodor has toured Poland, Britain, Austria and Latin America.

In Moscow he was competing against 32 violinists from 17 countries. Marie-Annique Nicola of France and Vania Milanov of Bulgaria won the bronze medals.

The piano competition was won by Andrei Gavrilov of the Soviet Union. Silver medalists were Mung Van Chung, an American born in Seoul, Korea, and Stanislav Igolinsky of the Soviet Union.

Chinese art on display at museum

LOS ANGELES — "The Arts of China," an exhibition of antique, contemporary and folk works, is now on display at the county Natural History Museum in Exposition Park.

Plaque wins Best in Show

POMONA — An original plaque creation by Laura Harthun of the Pomona Parks and Recreation Department was named Best in Show at the annual City Employes' Art Contest at the Pomona Public Library.

Judges were David W. Armstrong of Armstrong Galleries and Tony Navarro of the Progress-Bulletin. The exhibition will continue at the library to July 18.

Mrs. Harthun also won first in the painting division. Terry Layton of the public library was second, and Victor Colice of the Sanitation Department was third.

Second place in the craft and dimensional media division, in which Mrs. Harthun won first, went to Dean Schan of the Planning Department, and third to Patricia Sharp of the Redevelopment Department.

In the photography division first prize went to Lloyd Zillmer of the Maintenance and Service Department; second prize to Marta Reents of the public library, and third to Joe Cenoz of the Police Department.

Gas company given okay to up rates

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The California Public Utilities Commission gave Southern California Gas Company authority Friday to boost its rates by $67,734,000 a year to offset higher costs of supplies.

The monthly gas bill for a typical residential consumer will increase by 8.26 cents, the PUC said.

The increase was justified, the PUC said, because two of the firm's suppliers, El Paso Natural Gas Company and Transwestern Pipeline Company, are increasing their rates July 10 and July 11 respectively.

Youth Expression '74 scheduled at Hancock Park next Sunday

LOS ANGELES — The third annual Youth Expression '74, an outdoor festival for students of Los Angeles County high schools, will be held at Hancock Park from noon to 6 p.m. next Sunday.

The festival is co-sponsored by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and the Cultural Arts Section of the County Department of Parks and Recreation.

Youth Expression '74 will include the artistic achievements of over 700 high school students from areas as far apart as San Pedro and Saugus.

The festival will feature an exhibition of paintings, crafts, photographs, jewelry, sculpture and ceramics. Three stages, including a miniature Hollywood Bowl, will accommodate a continouous flow of student entertainers performing in rock bands, mime and theater groups, and in single acts as singers and dancers.

Young people attending the festival will be able to experience environmental art by taking part in assembling a Geodesic dome. They will also produce their own television shows with the aid of a fully-equipped Video Van.

Several youth organizations, including Barnsdall Park's Junior Arts Center, which played a major part in organizing the festival, Los Angeles County Juvenile Hall, Exceptional Children's Foundation and The Young Masters, will participate with exhibits of their own. Student films from finalists of the Broadway department stores' Youth Film Festival will be shown in the Museum's Viewing room, adjacent to the park.

Federation of Women's Clubs

Begins program against rape

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) The General Federation of Women's Clubs has declared its own war, the war on rape.

"This should be no hush-hush thing," said Mrs. Carroll E. Miller.

Mary Kathareine Miller, the new president of the 11-million-member international federation that calls itself the world's largest organization of women.

"Statistics show rape cases on the increase, no matter what the size of the community," said Mrs. Miller, who now calls Charleston, W.Va., and Missoula, Mont., home.

Officially the program, begun as Mrs. Miller took office for two years, is called "Women Against Rape (WAR).

"We need citizen action groups throughout the country to stop the rising incidence," she said. "We are going to train groups of women in every community through our state federation, our district and local clubs, who will attend court when rape cases are heard to give moral support to victims.

"Everyone who reads newspapers knows that rape victims often are ruthlessly grilled in courts and ironically their reputations are frequently impugned so that many victims no longer will report the crime and make their private humiliation a public affair.

"We want to change the laws. Today, while the victim's sexual history becomes an open book in the courtroom, the defendant's criminal record is not admissable in rape cases. And, as there rarely are witnesses, the case pits the word of the victim against that of the defendant."

"As far as I can determine, Indiana is the only state where no convicted rapist can be given a suspended sentence," she continued. "We want to see this legislation enacted across the country."

Accordingly, the federation will propose that its 15,000 clubs in the United States adopt a resolution proposing that it be mandatory for a convicted rapist to serve time.

The federation also has programs to fight alcoholism and drug abuse; to promote highway safety and make seat belts mandatory, and to improve decaying downtown areas.

Other major activities include work with the New York Stock Exchange to teach women the rudiments of finance, especially in the area of wills and estate settlements; in conservation, a 'Brighten the Night" program for better street lighting as a crime deterent; a "Justice for Juveniles" program; support of the Equal Rights Amendment, as many men are federation members, and promotion of the bicentennial.

Midsummer event

Auxilians plan annual gathering

Early California will be the theme for the annual steak fry to be sponsored by San Dimas Community Hospital Auxiliary later this month.

The picturesque grounds surrounding the home of Dr. and Mrs. Walter R. Buerger in Covina will be the setting for the third such gathering.

The event, July 27, will open with a social hour from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and dinner and dancing will continue after that hour. The party is open to auxiliary members, doctors and their families and the public.

Information concerning tickets may be obtained from any member of the auxiliary or by calling Mrs. Sue Green, 213-338-8763; Mrs. Carole Taylor, 213-966-5252; or Mrs. Debbie Edmiston, 213-335-5462.

Proceeds from the steak fry will go into a fund for scholarships for persons pursuing a career in the medical field.

Summer day camp plans set

In deference to the energy crisis, youngsters attending Palomares District Day Camp from July 23 to Aug. 1 will learn to make butter, candles, soap and woven fabric.

Sponsored by the Mt. San Antonio Council Camp Fire Girls, the day camp is open to both members of the organization and non-members. A limited number of camperships are also available, according to Mr. Bessie Eichorn, district director.

The adventures at Picnic Hill, Los Angeles County Fairgrounds will also include nature study, outdoor cookings, crafts and companionship.

The camp will be conducted from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. and bus transportation is provided to and from various locations throughout the community.

Mary Morris is camp director for the Palomares day camp. For information and registration, call the Camp Fire Office, 624-5076.

Silhouette magnified

The whole silhouette is magnified, but what makes it work is the lightness in weight of most materials, no matter how bulky they look.

The thickest coatings in mohair, cashmere mixtures or spongy tweeds weigh only a few ounces and generally are unlined. A big coat or swinging cape almost always is paired with an ultra-soft clinging dress or a figure-hugging suit.

"Soft, warm lightweight and touchable are the words for fabrics this fall," said the New York Couture Business Council as it closed its semi-annual "National Press Week" for visiting editors viewing the new season's collections.

Softies include cashmere, angora, angora tweed, challis, wool voile, matte jersey, wool jersey, and the silk-like qiana.

On the warmer side are the mohairs, boucle knits, camel's hair, melton for those unlined coats, men's wear fabrics, tweeds and the tweedy looking knits.

In the lightest group are the Ultrasuede (a suede-like synthetic), crepe de chine, wool crepe, warp knits and polyester gabardines.

Something should be said too for the fall prints. Several designers feature prints that are reproductions of well-known artists. Halston, for instance, has a black on white print that looks like a Jackson Pollock abstract. Hanae Mori, the Japanese designer, recaptures the clouds, landscapes and kimonos portrayed by Hiroshige, the Japanese artist of the early 19th century.

Many are florals with a look of the 1930s about them. Paisley is everywhere. So are thin stripes and small plaids.

Clothes are costlier for a variety of reasons, but manufacturers say they're trying to hold prices down by such tactics as eliminating buttons and buttonholes and cutting the amount of trimming. That's good news—it mean greater simplicity.

Exceptions: A strong revival of beading and rhinestone embroidery, many new types of metallic stencilled fabrics, the all-over sequin embroidery, the use of macrame lace, and the lavishness of ostrich and fur at necklines, hemlines and wrists.

As for color, a few designers continue to use the vivid shades as basics, and all spike their clothes with flashes of bright red. But the fall plallette is mostly the pale neutrals — brown, shades of wine and eggplant, loden green, mauve, rose and lilac. There is much black for evening.

A question came up during this week's fashion showings that needs answering. Question: Why is everyone doing the big, bulky, longer-skirted look for fall? Is there collusion in the industry?

Let Vincent Monte-Sano, president of the couture business council and in ready-to-wear for 35 years, answer.

"Not at all, he said. "You have to remember, these people eat, live and breathe the business. You can feel the changes in the air.

"It is the same sense of the woodsman who's spent his life with nature. It's like the yachtsman who's sailed all his life. He can feel when the winds will change. He senses when a squall's coming."

Monte-Sano, by the way, grew up on Long Island Sound and has been a racing sailor most of his life.

Marriage preparations

By DR. JAMES PRICE

Up until just years ago, a couple preparing to get married would contact their family physician just long enough to have the necessary blood test for syphilis drawn. Other than this, medicine was asked to add almost nothing to the preparations for marriage.

Dr. Price is president of American Academy of Family Physicians

The increased sophistication of the public and the general availability of medical advice concerning contraception today has created an important role for the physician in helping a couple prepare for a life together.

Most states still require a blood test for syphilis prior to applying for the marriage license. This necessitates the drawing of a small quantity of blood. It is done because undiagnosed and untreated syphilis can have a crippling effect upon a baby. With V.D. at an all time high in this country, this test is becoming increasingly more important.

Since the three day measles (rubella), if contracted during the first three months of a woman's pregnancy, can cause defects in the baby such as blindness and heart malformations, many states couple the test for syphilis with a test that indicates whether the woman has ever had three day measles.

Should a bride have escaped this as a child, she may be immunized against it before she gets pregnant, but in no case should this immunization be done while a person is pregnant since fatal abnormalities may result.

It takes only a little more blood for the blood type of a couple to be determined in order to anticipate possible rh problems in babies as they come along. Incidentally, most cases of rh difficulties in babies now are avoidable through the use of a new desensitizing shot which is given to the mother shortly after birth.

A thorough physical examination should be part of the premarital preparation of both partners, since some treatable defects may interfere with a normal happy life. This is particularly true of the pelvic examination where abnormalities of the reproductive system can be detected as can any condition likely to result in painful intercourse.

Family planning is an important part of every premarital examination. Appropriate means of contraception should be discussed and in some instances (such as the "pill") be begun a month or so before marriage. This is important if the bride expects to be protected against pregnancy during her honeymoon.

Counseling concerning attitudes about sex is quite important and can help prevent miserable honeymoons. Both bride and groom should be present during this counseling which is aimed at helping them understand the anatomy, physiology, feelings and expectations about sex of themselves and their partners. It's important for an inexperienced couple to recognize that normal males and females differ somewhat in their feelings about sex, and appreciation of these differences adds much to be a solid basis on which to begin married life.

Genetic counseling may be indicated whenever either partner has some knowledge of a potential hereditary problem such as mongolism or other specific birth defects. In the absence of any recognized familial disease, genetic counseling, other than that normally done by the family physician, is probably an unnecessary expense.

Attention, brides

The Progress-Bulletin Women's Department looks forward to printing the stories of your engagement and wedding.

Please pick up engagement and wedding forms at the newspaper office and return them with the picture you wish used.

Engagement forms are not accepted if they are received less than six weeks before the wedding, and wedding forms should be returned within two weeks after the wedding with a picture of the bride only.

NATURE STUDY

Mrs. Eleanor Niederhauser holds a wasps nest composed of "paper" formed from the wasps' bodies as she conducts nature study for youngsters at a day camp sponsored by Camp Fire Girls.

Spaghetti dinner set

A spaghetti dinner is planned Tuesday evening by the Mothers Club of Boy Scout Troop 116.

Dinner will be served from 5:30 to 8 p.m. at the First Lutheran Church, 1751 N. Park Ave?., which sponsors the troop.

Proceeds will be used to help send the 30 scouts in the troop to summer camp.

Tickets may be obtained at the door. For additional information, call the chairman, Mrs. Theresa Coliten, 622-7548.

Greek Orthodox community organized in this valley

Culminating a year's effort by people of Greek descent, the official organization is being represented by a board composed of residents from San Marino to Upland.

On June 16, Bishop Meletios of San Francisco met with the Covina-Pomona Valley congregation and gave his approval for the community to hold church services. The Very Rev. George Hadjis was assigned as the preist.

Rev. Hadjis is a graduate of the University of Athens and served with the Greek Army during World War II. He was ordained in 1941. After serving in Greece, he was chaplain at Veterans Administration hospitals in Iowa and in Chio.

At the June 30 service, the Divine Liturgy was read in the facilities of St. John's Episcopal Church before a capacity crowd and a gift from Bishop Meletios, an official Antimision (Blessed Altarcloth), was dedicated.

Services will be held today at 11:30 a.m. at St. John's Episcopal Church, 4745 Wheeler Ave., La Verne, through the cooperation of the Episcopal congregation and the Rev. Richard Avery. The next service is scheduled on July 21 at the same time and place.

Traditional Greek School will be taught in the future along with a Sunday School for children. Information may be obtained by calling the community president, Harry Vlachos, (213) 339-6276 or the president of St. Elizabeth's Philoptochos Society, Mrs. Maria Printzis, (714) 982-4791.

The second annual picnic of the Greek Orthodox Community will be held in August. Traditional Greek dishes and salads will be served. Greek music and dancing are planned.

WCTU sets picnic and meeting

A picnic lunch has been planned by the La Verne Woman's Christian Temperance Union Tuesday at Hillcrest West patio, 2700 Magnolia Ave, La Verne, at 11:30 a.m.

Following the luncheon Mrs. Jessie Haver Butler will discuss what she learned during eight years of life in England when her husband, Hugh D. Butler, was assistant commercial attache at the American Embassy in London. Family child care, household management and what the British thought of Prohibition are some of the subjects to be covered.

Mrs. Beulah Stanley will develop the devotional theme, "Women, the guardians of community standards."

The meeting is open to the public.

to preserve garden freshness.

Wondering what to do with the ripe fruits and vegetables growing in your backyard? Is there a way you can take advantage of those bargains at produce stands? Our Edison Home Economist will show you how to can or freeze them so you can enjoy them year-round.

You'll learn how to make jams and jellies, too, and even how to make your own pickles.

We will also give you money-saving tips on ways to conserve electricity this summer. It's all part of Edison's continuing Consumer Education Program.

Canning and freezing preserves harvest

For those who have planted their own garden and expect an over-abundant harvest, old-fashioned canning and freezing will preserve those extra fruits and vegetables.

Mrs. Tani Welsh, Southern California Edison home economist, says that canning and freezing not only saves perishable crops for year-round enjoyment but also helps reduce the food budget. Costs can be reduced when buying produce during the peak harvest time in the summer when the price is the lowest.

Mrs. Welsh will present the program "Preserving Garden Freshness" on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The Monday program will be at 7:30 p.m. at Imperial Savings, 400 N. Indian Hill Blvd., Claremont. At 10 a.m. Wednesday, the program will be offered free of charge to the public at First Federal Savings and Loan of San Gabriel Valley, 2111 Bonita ve., La Verne.

The final public program is slated Thursday at 10 a.m. at Great Western Savings, 300 Pomona Mall West.

During the presentations, the Edison Company home economists will also discuss ways of conserving electric energy in the home during the warm summer months.

MRS. ANTHONY RECUPERO

Institute to install officers

Pomona Branch of Young Ladies Institute will install new officers on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Mrs. William Woolery, institute deputy, will be the installing officer, assisted by her team from Corpus Christi 188, Fullerton.

The general chairman for the evening is Mrs. James Riley and Mrs. Vance Mingus is mistress of ceremonies.

Officers to be installed are Mrs. Anthony Recupero, president; Mrs. Riley, past president; Mrs. Matthew Markey, first vice president; Mrs. Robert Galligan, second vice president; Mrs. Michael Lawless, recording secretary; Mrs. George Mercado, financial secretary; Mrs. Albert Cohn, treasurer; Mrs. James Jacoby, marshal; Mrs. Norwald Nelson, inside sentinel; Mrs. Joseph Struckus, outside sentinel; Mrs. A. McCoy, organist; Mrs. Richard Salcido, Mrs. Dean Spencer, Mrs. R. H. Hendrix, Mrs. William Crowe and Mrs. Herbert Ehler, trustees.

A salad buffet will be served after the installation.

Less makeup

Don't wear a lot of makeup if you are going to do any vigorous exercise, such as tennis. It will only run and smear and detract from your appearance.

Ocean weather station victim of budget cuts

HONOLULU (UPI)— Ocean Station November, last of the Coast Guard's mid-ocean weather and navigational outposts, has been retired, a victim of budget cuts and satellite technology.

For 31 years, a Coast Guard cutter was always in or near a 100-square-mile section of ocean halfway between Hawaii and California. The duty vessel was designated Ocean Station November.

The station was eliminated June 30.

The station was used primarily for weather observation and reporting. Meteorological tests were performed around the clock. Twice a day helium balloons were launched for readings on upper air conditions. Detailed weather reports were transmitted eight times daily in international code.

Because it maintained a relatively fixed position, the station also acted as a navigational aid for both air and sea traffic. Any aircraft passing within the station's radar range was plotted and ite position and true ground speed were supplied to the pilot. Cutters averaged about 2,500 plottings for each three-week stint at November.

Oceanographic readings were also taken at regular intervals and the statio served as a communications relay center.

The November vessel was always available for emergency search and rescue operations. In October, 1956, the cutter Pontchartrain rescued all passengers and crew aboard a Pan American Airways clipper forced down in mid-Pacific.

Prior to the aircraft's ditching, the Pontchartrain laid down a two-mile swatch of foam to ease the impact of ditching. It had little effect, however—the clipper ruptured when it hit. The tail section sheared completely away.

But everyone aboard — 24 passengers and seven crew members — evacuated over one of the wings and was safely picked up by small craft from the Pontchartrain. The aircraft sank 20 minutes after impact, 1,150 miles from nearest iand.

Rescue work was infrequent and there was little to relieve the tedium of each three-week duty. Life was particularly deadly when, to save fuel, the cutters would stop all engines and drift for hours, and then pull back onto station.

The airlines tried to help by putting their sexiest-voiced stewardesses on the radio to report the plane's position and request bearings. The crew, in turn, often piped the voices over the ship's public address system as a reminder of what was passing high overhead.

Baseball and football scores were also relayed to those on board by the transitting pilots along with personal messages from either Hawaii or California.

On one memorable occasion, the station ship put the motor whaleboat over the side and told the crew to "get lost" so they could be picked up by the cutter's radar. The first part of the exercise went according to plan; the whaleboat and the cutter parted company as the cutter disappeared over the horizon.

Then the radar failed and the crew of the whaleboat drifted for hours on the lonely Pacific until emergency repairs were made to the ship's radar and the rescue was effected just as night was falling. "I never thought that damn bucket would look good, but she sure did that night," said one of the survivors.

November was one of eight stations established throughout the Atlantic and Pacific between 1940-43. After World War II, other nations helped man the outposts. By 1954, the U.S. commitment was down to four.

All four were retired within the past year. November was the last.

Ever-increasing operational costs brought on their demise, according the Coast Guard. Each cutter's 21-day cruise cost an estimated $200,000.

Officials say most of November's services can be covered by communications and weather satellites, with an assist from merchant shipping. But they admit the loss will have an effect, particularly in the area of weather reporting.

Promise of research brings frustrations

By CARL A. VINES

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — One of the great frustrations of life is that the bright promise of scientific research runs amok in its own technological advancement.

Take the productive use of waste heat from electric power generating plants. For years, researchers have painted glowing pictures of the potential for crop production, greenhouse application and in the commercial production of fish and seafood.

And there have been notable successes in this field, in the Northwest and the New York-New England area, in Japan and other countries.

But there are notable failures, also.

River of Wate

First, let's take a look at what we're talking about. Consider the Tennessee Valley Authority's Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant. That facility will use 1.9 million gallons of water per minute for cooling purposes.

That's a river of water, literally —equal to the average flow of the Little Tennessee River at its juncture with the Tennessee River and equal to one-tenth of the flow of the Tennessee River in North Alabama where the plant is located.

The Browns Ferry Nuclear plant will use that much water for cooling every hour of its operation —and more.

Catfish Grew

And that means, regardless of beneficial uses of heated water, that millions of dollars will still be needed for giant cooling towers for such plants.

One other point —the waste water is not not water, it's warmed up 10 or 15 degrees, 30 degrees at most from its temperature in the river or lake from which it comes.

But that's enough temperature increase to have effects on production of vegetables in greenhouses, or field crops where underground pipes are installed to transfer the heat to the earth in which the crops grow.

Now the clinker. Back in the 1960s, TVA got interested, as did a number of other organizations, in use of heated water to increase fish production — mainly catfish in the Southeast.

Tests showed it would work. The catfish grew five or six times as fast in the heated water as they did in unheated water.

Other Problems

A bunch of people jumped into the catfish business. And for a time they prospered, bat suddenly there were so many fish being produced with no middleman organizations to handle them that the market became glutted and producers began losing money.

That was the least of the problems. At Gallatin in Middle Tennessee it was found that concentrated production of catfish also produced concentrations of waste that had to be dealt with. This called for construction of a waste treatment plant, an expensive proposition at best.

And there were other problems. Concentrations of fish proved more than normally susceptible to disease. More losses. Concentrations of fish created problems with the oxygen content of the water. Again, more losses.

And mechanical problems proved disastrous at times. A pump failure at Gallatin, for instance, resulted in death of 70,000 pounds of catfish when the water stopped circulating properly.

Oh, the idea is still a good one. No mistake about that. And TVA and others are still in the business of dealing with the problems, studying the technology and proving its economic feasibility.

And there are successes in the field already.

Weekly stocks

Market concerned with rising rates

NEW YORK (UPI) — Concern with rising interest rates dominated Wall Street this week, and prices declined broadly in relatively slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 27.70 points a week ago, fell another 12.98 to 802.41. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 1.46 to 86.00. The NYSE Common Stock Index dropped 0.92 to 44.90.

Declines far outnumbered advances, 1,327 to 396, among 1,954 issues crossing the tape.

Volume totaled 57,959,830 shares, compared with 54,164,170 shares last week and 61,911,540 the year before.

Soaring interest rates particularly the so-called prime rate charged by banks on loans to top-rated commercial borrowers—have been weighing on the market for months, since the current climb began in mid-March at 8¾ per cent. The best rally of the year took place a few weeks ago when First National City Bank of New York dropped its prime rate briefly. The move was not followed, however, and this week it seemed evident the prime soon would climb to 12 per cent or more.

On Monday, First National Bank of Chicago raised its rate to a record high of 11.8 per cent.

Throughout the remainder of the week, other banks began lifting their rates to 11¾ per cent from the prevailing 11½ per cent rate. Bank of America, San Francisco, and New York's First National City Bank and Chase Manhattan, the country's top three, went to the new level, as did smaller banks around the country. The move above 12 per cent is expected to come possibly as early as Monday when First National of Chicago announces its rate for the week.

The Federal Reserve Board reported late Thursday industrial and corporate loan demand at New York's leading banks rose by $551 million last week. This continued heavy loan demand, and the FED's determination to keep the credit clamps tight as an anti-inflation move, put upward pressure on rates.

How to make money in stocks

Wall St.—a state of mind

By LOUIS RUKEYSER

Despite the austere and humorless face it tries to present to the public, Wall Street is about as scientific and logical as the most incurable manic-depressive at your local asylum. In the long run it will respond to forces more powerful than itself, such as a truly expanding economy, but in the short run it is difficult to predict precisely because its behavior is so unscientific and illogical.

It goes to extremes of excitement and depression. It's as jittery as your old Aunt Gertrude, and it finds it almost impossible to cope with any change in its environment. For maddening stretches, it will seem to ignore the obvious and to overreact to the unessential.

Once you have understood that Sigmund Freud can be as important to the stock market as Adam Smith, you will find it easier to forget the myth that Wall Street—the storied haven of so much of the nation's supposedly "smart money"—is a brilliant forecaster of the nation's economy.

It has been calculated, for example, that the stock market predicted 11 of the last four recessions—a performance that may exceed the combined record of the nation's opposition politicians.

Were it not for the market's eventual awakenings to reality, investing would indeed seem a hopeless gamble for the ordinary person. But the market's short-term capriciousness can be a source of hypnotic fascination—and a joy when you anlayze it correctly. For what the market actually represents is not a crystal ball or anything else of such mystic magnitude. It is an instant photograph of the ephemeral mood of a significant chunk of America.

It was John M. Hancock, a partner in Lehman Brothers, who first observed that there are times when the market throws all bad news into the wastebasket, and times when it does the same with all good news. The bulls and the bears are often nothing more than the herd on the Street, and the wise individual will remember the maxim of the senior J. P. Morgan, who remarked at a moment of pessistic frenzy that "it always stops raining."

Plainly, the initial analysis you do in the stock market should be of yourself. Are you capable of resisting the comforting jostle of the crowds? Can you train yourself to develp an intelligent investment program, and then to stick to it when everybody at the cocktail party tells you you're nuts?

Do you really want to make money in the stock market, or do you have some other motivation—a jolly social experience, perhaps, or a punishment for your sins elsewhere in this vale?

The most successful investors, from Bernard Baruch on down, have been those who were willing to subject themselves to painful self-analysis. Where did I go wrong (or right)? Was I jumping at a tip I heard on the golf course instead of checking it out first? Did I hold on greedily instead of selling when the prospects changed? Or, alternatively, did I get so upset because the stock lost three points that I sold just before it really started to move?

Most basically, do I really understand what I am doing in the stock market? Do I want growth capital, or income, or some combination of the two? If growth is my objective, how much growth? Do I actually believe that calling something an investment is just giving a fancy rationalization to a speculation that went sour? Or do I have a coherent investment plan that both my broker and I fully understand?

If raising these questions suggests to you that investing is going to require some time and thought, then you are already on the right track. Those who are unwilling to make that kind of effort are probably better off putting their money elsewhere, such as a mutual fund, and letting the fund's directors have the headaches (and the fun) of investing for them. This may also be the route for those who shy at examining their fragile egos in the light of the unflickering numbers of their stock-market results.

If, however, Wall Street represents to you an exciting challenge to your intellect and spirit, here is confirmation of the desirability of taking an active role in your own investing. If your attitude is right, then all you need is the facts—and those we are about to get.

Asking what's the best thing to buy in Wall Street is like asking what's the best thing to buy in Macy's. It depends on what you're shopping for.

If you're looking for secure income, for a return on your savings a bit higher than the corner bank is offering, then there are several departments designed precisely for your need—stocks that pay high and consistent dividends, for example, or bonds that pay good interest every six months.

If, on the other hand, you're an experienced swinger looking for something a little wilder in the line of fun and games, there is plenty to suit your tastes too—esoteric pastimes, like buying on margin, selling short, trading in commodities and dealing in "puts" and "calls."

For the typical new investor, though, everything he needs is right out there in full view on the ground floor. It's in the "common stocks" department on the counter marked "growth."

Oil shale causes boom

RIFLE, Colo. (UPI) — Oil shale already is causing a boom here but informed expert ssay its ultimate impact on the nation's energy needs may be small.

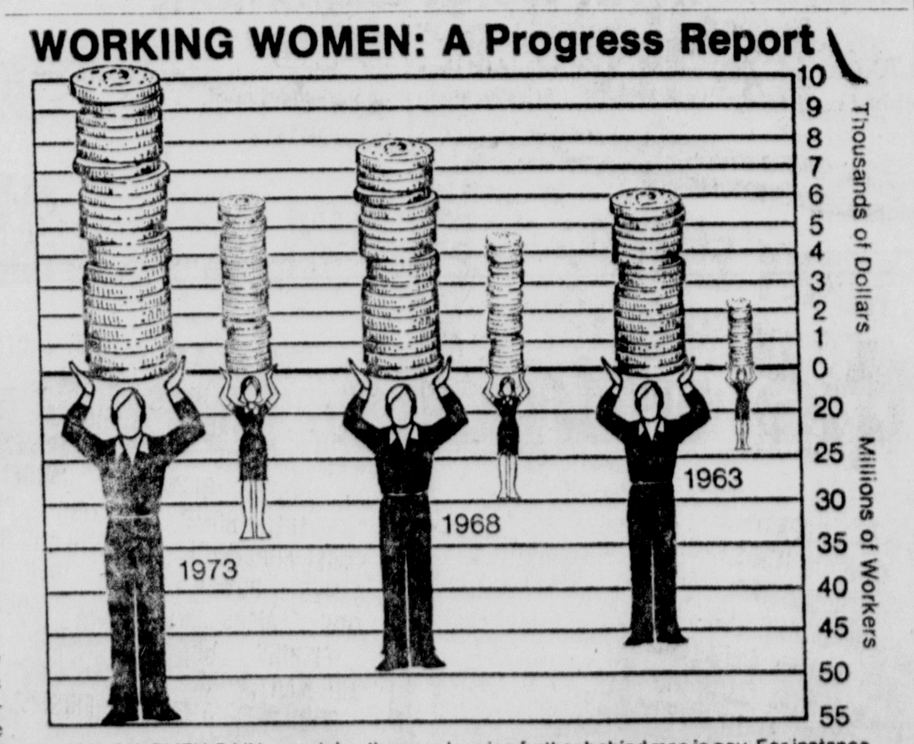
"Colorado's coal probably always will be more important and valuable than oil shale," says Stanleigh Megargee, city manager of Rifle, center of the boom. It followed the sale last January of $210 million (only 20 per cent of which actually has been paid to the government) of a 5,090-acre federal oil shale lease to two major oil companies.

John W. Savage, chemical engineer and rancher, has followed the steps of his father in studying the baffling puzzle of oil shale for half a century. He has traveled much of the globe to visit oil shale deposits and plants. He made an exhaustive study of the huge Soviet shale oil industry centered in the Baltic republic of Estonia.

Savage told United Press International talk by government and oil company enthusiasts of producing two million barrels of oil a day from shale by 1980 is improbable. "It would take a tremendous effort," he said, "to produce one million barrels a day by then and such an effort probably could not be justified economically and might cause serious ecological problems."

Savage opposes any crash program using tax funds to produce shale oil. Nevertheless, he says, all the processes presently being used experimentally to produce shale oil eventually will result in all liklihood, in a natural production growth that may reach half a million barrels a day by 1980.

WORKING WOMEN: A Progress Report



WHILE WOMEN GAIN more jobs, they are lagging further behind men in pay. For instance, a professional job that pays $13,826 to a man would pay only $8,946 to a woman. Similarly, a male factory worker might make $8,880 while his female counterpart, doing the same work, would make on average $5,145.

Some beyond repair:

Restoring older houses can be trap for unwary

NEW YORK (UPI) — "The house" is coming into its own. The country colonials, roomy "gingerbread" Victorians, the city brownstones are being snapped up by buyers intent on the charm and value of the past. 4

Old houses have both — charm and value—says R.A. Clem Labine, editor of the Old House Journal, but they also have pitfalls. They demand know-how. "They really should be declared an endangered and dangerous species."

For every old house that is being well cared for, Labine says, there are 20 that are being allowed to deteriorate, or being mutilated in the name of remodeling, to say nothing of the lovely old houses that are beng razed in the march of "progress."

But not every old house is a worthy prospect for the would-be resorer. "An old house," warns Labine, "can be a money-gobbling trap for the unwary."

It calls for a through professional inspection of the mechanical systems buried beneath the romantic exterior, warns Labine. "It's these mundane details that go unchecked in that enthusiastic first flush of old-house fever that can spell the difference between success and disaster."

Labine says tte Old House Journal has catalogued the most common —and costly— ailments of old houses. "While the checklist doesn't take the place of evaluation by a licensed engineer, it will help to eliminate those houses that are beyond your means to repair," he says.

Traps

The five points most overlooked:

WIRING—Unless it has been rewired recently, an old house invariably is underpowered. A house today needs a minimum of 100 amps of 3-wire 240-volt service. Check the entrance box in the cellar. ONLY TWO OR THREE CIRCUITS (fuses) are a tip of inadequate electrical capacity. To modernize an inadequate electrical system will cost $500 to $1,000 or more.

ROT AND TERMITE DAMAGE — Starting in the cellar, use an ice pick to probe sills and ends of joists. Any sponginess is cause for concern.

HEATING PLANT — An old house is likely to have a coal furnace that has been converted to gas or oil, a prime source of trouble. Look for a nameplate (absence of one is a sign of poor quality) to check for a date stamp. If a boiler is approaching 25 years or older, expect to spend $1,500 replacing it before too long.

PLUMBING—Check hot and cold water pipes in the cellar with a magnet. If the magnet sticks, it's galvanized iron pipe and won't last too long. Inspect main waste pipes for signs of leaks or patches. On top floor, turn on all faucets and flush toilet. If pressure drops markedly, either the house isn't being supplied with adequate pressure or pipes are constricted with scale.

WATER DAMAGE—Keep an eye on outside walls and ceilings (especially the top floor) for stains that are telltale signs of water damage. Leaks can be coming from holes in the roof, leaky gutters or walls or faulty plumbing. Water damage should be traced to its source. It could mean a $25 pipe repair —or a $2,500 new roof.

Labine said the Journal, after a survey of 500 18th and 19th century houses, concluded "many people buy an old house because of its charm —and then proceed to eradicate that charm by thoughtless alterations, 'remuddling' rather than remodeling or restoration."

Victorian houses built after 1860 are particularly vulnerable to character-destroying modernizations, he said, because they are not old enough to be considered antiques.

If you own an old house — or are thinking of buying one— Labine suggests:

When in doubt, restore as much of the original as possible. The architect and builder had a specific plan in mind. Unless you have a similiar clear plan, you are best off fixing up the original rather than remodeling a piece at a time.

Don't remove detail. Ornamental woodwork and plaster give a house much of its character. It also represents craftsmanship that is irreplaceable today. It's not hard to restore such detail, but virtually impossible to replace it once it is gone.

Don't try to make the house seem older than it really is. Some Victorian houses are given "instant antiquing" by tacking on colonial details, usually with unhappy results.

Windows have a surprisingly great effect on the appearance of a house. A picture window punched through the wall of an old house can completely unbalance the design. If you have to replace window sash, use the same type as originally installed. Changing size and shape of window panes the character of a house.

Kitchens and bathrooms are rarely adequate in old houses, but these are not areas for restoration. Here the prime objective is to create a modern facility that functions well. Only the decor need be suitable to your "old house."

New system may assist home loans

WASHINGTON — Residential mortgage money may be more readily available to financial institutions beginning this month with the initiaton of the Automated Mortgage Market Information Network Inc. (AMMINET), reports the American Bankers Association (ABA).

The AMMINET is a computerized central information system that is now in nationwide operation. Taking two years to develop, the network gives investors the opportunity to communicate offers to buy and sell residential mortgage investments.

The ABA is a co-sponsor of the AMMINET project along with the U.S. League of Savings Associations, the National League of Insured Savings Associations, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

"Banks are now being urged to join with other secondary mortgage market participants," said Paul J. O'Brien, chairman of the ABA's housing and real estate division.

"For the first time, there is a central data bank of information on secondary market mortgages that should help to free-up residential mortgage money available to prospective home buyers."

Cost for a subscriber to join the program is $400 a month. Desk top computer terminals are used for communication between subscribers and the central computer.

Inflation, high rates hinder home buying

WASHINGTON — Inflation and high interest rates are damaging the opportunities of home buyers at the very time of the highest housing requirements in the nation's history, said Lewis Cenker, president of the National Association of Home Builders.

"The post-World War II baby boom is now being reflected in the fact that in this decade of the 1970s the number of men in the 30 to 40 bracket will go up by 4.6 million," he said.

"This is the family-forming, child-rearing, home-seeking age group. It is the group that will be hurt most by any decline in housing opportunities."

Cenker said the volume of new housing starts now is almost 40 per cent below the same time last year and that building permits—a forerunner of the future—have dropped even further proportionately.

"This bodes ill for meeting the nation's needs," he warned.

"This decade is precisely the time of the highest housing requirements in the nation's history and probably the highest we will ever have in the foreseeable future, given current population trends."

Anna Anderson

"This delightful little town is cooled by clean sea breezes and has sensational year 'round weather plus cultural and recreational amenities.

Nearly every hill-high home has a view . . . looking down on San Clemente, Dana Point Yacht Harbor, the San Clemente golf course, and the Western White House. And the homes offer a wealth of luxury features and a variety of exceptional floor plans.

If you've had it with the health hazards and discomforts of hot, smoggy areas, now's the time to visit me at Presidential Heights . . . to see and feel the difference for yourself. You'll find me in the sales office."

Wednesday the fourth of March, one thousand seven hundred and eighty-n

THE Conventions of a number of the States having, at the time of their adopting the Constitution, expressed a desire, in order to prevent misconstruction or abuse of its powers, that further declaratory and restrictive clauses should be added: And as extending the ground of public confidence in the Government, will best ensure the beneficent ends of its institution:

RESOLVED, by the SENATE and HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES of the UNITED STATES of AMERICA in Congress assembled, two-thirds of both Houses concurring, That the following Articles be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States, as Amendments to the Constitution of the United States; all, or any of which articles, when ratified by three-fourths of the said Legislatures, to be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of the said Constitution, viz.

ARTICLES in addition to, and Amendment of the Constitution of the United States of America, proposed by Congress, and ratified by the Legislatures of the several States, pursuant to the fifth Article of the Original Constitution.

Article the first ... After the first enumeration required by the first Article of the Constitution, there shall be one [illegible] number shall amount to one hundred, after which, the proportion shall [illegible] Representatives, nor less than one Representative [illegible] hundred, after which, the proportion [illegible] than one Representative [illegible]

Article the tenth ... Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual [illegible]

Article the eleventh ... The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

Article the twelfth ... The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

ATTEST.

Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg Speaker of the House of Representatives.

John Adams, Vice President of the United States, and President of the Senate.

John Beckley, Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Sam. A. Otis Secretary of the Senate.

America, proposed by Congress and Ratified by the Legislatures of several [illegible] to the Fifth Article of the Original Constitution.

ARTICLE THE FIRST ... Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

ARTICLE THE SECOND ... A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed.

that's why it is included in the very first amendment to our Constitution, as part of our Bill of Rights. Without that free exchange of information among its citizens, no democracy can survive for long. The freedom that the press has exercised since the earliest days of this nation have helped to make America a citadel of democracy. Let's not tamper with the very foundations of that structure . . . let's preserve the rights our founding fathers gave us.

PASSENGER CAR TIRE GUARANTEE

Montgomery Ward guarantees each of its passenger car tires for a specified number of miles when used on passenger cars or station wagons, except taxis. If your tire does not give you this mileage because of:

- defects in material or workmanship,
- normal road hazard failure,
- premature tread wearout (2/32 inches or less remaining);

Montgomery Ward will:

1. During the first 10% of guaranteed mileage, replace the tire free.

Nail punctures repaired free during the entire guaranteed mileage.

Charge after first 10% of guaranteed mileage based on selling price in effect at the time of return at branch to which returned, including federal excise tax.

Passenger tires used on taxicabs, and motor vehicles other than passenger cars are guaranteed on the same basis against defects in materials and workmanship only.

2 body plies of polyester cord, the modern tire material, for strength and comfortable riding.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — With prices so high, it might be well to think of planting more vegetables rather than so many costly flowers. Many vegetables can be most decorative when growing and one has extra things for freezing, too. — Mrs. D. M. of Illinois.

DEAR POLLY — So that pants creasers will work for the wide-bottomed pants so popular today simply insert the creasers upside down. They do the job beautifully. — RHONDA.

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, % this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — We always keep a magnetic flashlight clinging to the side of the refrigerator so we know where to find it in case of an emergency. — KAREN.

DEAR POLLY — Those of us who have weekend homes and keep food in freezers often find the power goes off during the week. We may have spoiled food even though the power has come back on and the food has refrozen. To alert oneself to the situation, tie a string around an ice cube, hang from a freezer rack. If the power fails for any length of time, the cube will melt and serve as a signal. — VERA.

DEAR POLLY — To help the paper shortage and save a little money, I pack lunches in the plastic produce bags that come from the grocery or those from the bakery, rather than buying regular lunch bags. They hold up longer than paper bags and can be rinsed out and reused. — DAWN.

DEAR POLLY — It is so easy to misplace a billfold when it is removed from one's purse and is put down on a grocery counter. I find it practical to attach mine to the newer-type key ring holder that attaches to the inside of one's purse. It extends when in use and retracts when put back in position. These rings are strong, attractive and take up little room. — MRS. T.C.R.

DEAR POLLY — To wash glass fiber drapes without breaking the fibers, I hang them on the clothesline with snap pins. Do not overlap the drapes. Spray with the fine mist from the garden hose, from top to bottom and on both sides. Leave to drip dry, then hang as usual. — H.V.N.

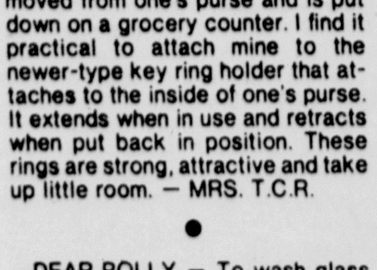
DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is for students. If your teacher does not like your getting up all the time to throw papers and other things in the wastebasket, tape a paper bag to the side of your desk for scraps. At the end of each day empty it and then tape it back in place. KATHY.



Pet Panel

Quick cross-stitching and bright colors make fast work of this lovely panel for his room. No. 2257 has hot-iron transfer for design; color chart.

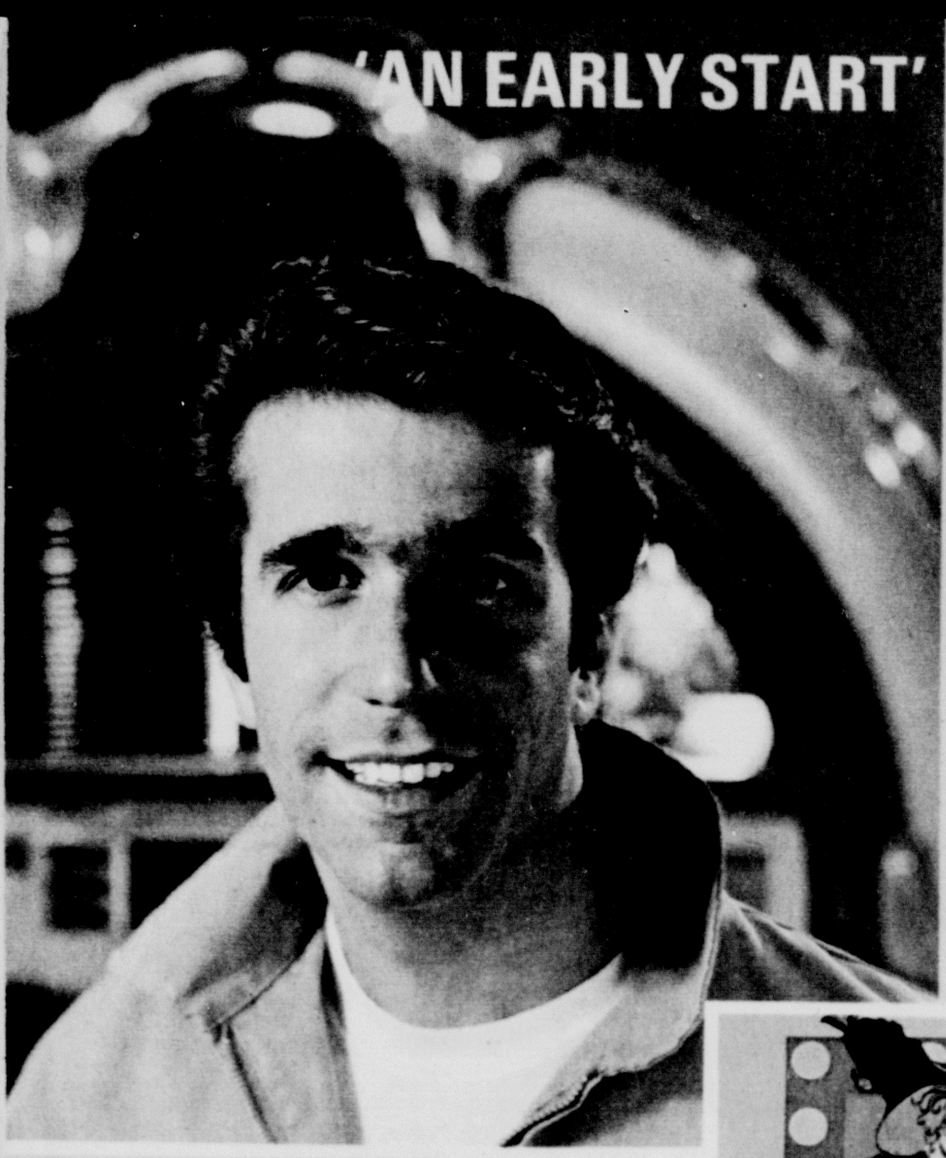
'AN EARLY START'



Henry Winkler, who received his Master of Fine Arts Degree from the Yale School of Drama, notes, "If people are born to try things, I was born to be an actor." Winkler, who portrays Fonzie on ABC's Happy Days (Tuesdays, 8 pm), was born in New York City and is the only son of Ilse and Harry Winkler. While still in nursery school, Henry made his acting debut as a tube of toothpaste and "re-created" the part in the first grade. He played the role of Billy Budd in the 8th grade and appeared in his first musical, "Of Thee I Sing," as Wintergreen while in the 11th grade. Following high school graduation in New York, he studied drama and psychology at Emerson College and received his degree as a drama major. While at Emerson he was included in Who's Who of American Students and Universities and received various other awards. During high school and college, Winkler studied in Switzerland for four-month intervals and worked in a lumber mill in a small German town. While a student at Yale, he performed in more than 30 plays with the university company. Henry has made more than 25 commercials and appeared in more than 50 plays including "42 Seconds to Broadway," in which he made his Broadway debut. He has performed in six showcases with the Yale Repertory players and was seen in National Educational Television's "The Great American Dream Machine" and "Masquerade." After writing "Off the Wall," an evening of improvisations in which he appeared, he did his first feature film, "Lords of Flatbush." His second feature film was "Crazy Joe." Winkler moved to California in 1973 and made his network TV debut on the Mary Tyler Moore Show.

'The Edwardians'

Masterpiece Theatre will present during July "The Edwardians," four programs selected from a BBC series of biographical dramatizations. On KCET, Channel 28, "The Edwardians," which the London Daily Mail called "drama of unfailing interest and uncommon richness," will begin with "Lloyd George" on July 7 (9 pm), followed by "The Reluctant Juggler" on July 14, "Mr. Rolls and Mr. Royce" on July 21 and "Conan Doyle" on July 28. All but "Lloyd George" are 90-minute shows. Alistair Cooke will continue to act as host for the Masterpiece Theatre presentations, which will be produced for American audiences by WGBH, the Boston public television station. During August and September two Peter Wimsey productions will be repeated (they first appeared last fall). "Clouds of Witness" (five episodes) will be seen August 4 through September 1, and "The Unpleasantness at the Bellona Club" (four episodes) will be telecast September 8 through September 29. "Lloyd George," which kicks off "The Edwardians" on Masterpiece Theatre on July 7, stars Anthony Hopkins in what the London Daily Mail called "an extraordinarily vivid performance. The affectionate family man, the political intriguer, the artful negotiator, the incorrigible philanderer and the man with a fiery social conscience emerge sharply from the subtle script."

'LATINO FESTIVAL'

Trini Lopez and Jose Feliciano are the co-hosts of "Latino Festival," a music special featuring Latin music, which airs as an ABC Wide World: Special, Wednesday, at 11:30PM. "Latino Festival" marks the first time that a music program featuring all Latin-American performers and highlighting Latin music will be carried on major network time throughout the country. The show, which was filmed at the Plaza Nueva in San Antonio, Texas, stars Trini Lopez and Jose Feliciano, Johnny Rodriguez, the rock group, El Chicano, singer-comedienne Liz Torres and the Mariachi Nuevo San Juan Band.

Trini Lopez, who recently celebrated his tenth anniversary in show business, will perform "Michael, Row Your Boat Ashore" and "If I Had a Hammer," and he and Feliciano will sing "La Bamba" and "Piel Canella." Feliciano, a young Puerto Rican guitarist and singer who has been blind from birth, was discovered while playing the folk clubs of Greenwich Village. He sings "I Like What You Give," "Rain," "Usted," and "Sabor A Mi."

Johnny Rodriguez, whose matinee idol looks attract female fans of all ages, played guitar with the great country music star, Tom T. Hall, before going solo as a singer-performer. Johnny performs his Top 20 country hit version of the George Harrison song, "Something," followed by "That's the Way Love Goes." Liz Torres, a young Puerto Rican singer-comedienne from New York City, does a comedy monologue in which she includes the song, "Going Out of My Head." The rock group, El Chicano, performs "Tell Her She's Lovely," followed by a medley of songs by the Mariachi Nuevo "Sing," "Eres Tu," "Adelita," San Juan Band, which includes "Ay, Jalisco No Te Rajes," "Tecalitlan," "Tocula" and "Jarabe Zapatiado."

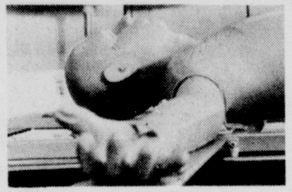
'THE QUESTOR TAPES

The special effects for this film had to be very convincing, maybe even more than in Star Trek, because the story takes place in the present day," says Gene Roddenberry, creator of tar Trek, about his latest project,



What's an android? It's an ambulatory computer simulating a human being. Robert Foxworth plays Questor, an android created by a missing Nobel Prize-winning scientist. The top photo shows Questor before it is activated in the laboratory.

"The Questor Tapes" on the NBC Wednesday Night Movie at 9PM. The World Premiere stars Robert Foxworth as an android—a robot with completely human appearance. Many of the special effects take place in the laboratory where the android is activated. In its embryo form, the android is a flesh-colored mannequin-type shape, with no distinguishing features. During the film, the android takes human form.

To form this mannequin outfit for Foxworth (and his stunt double, Kenny Studer), special effects man 'Whitey' McMahan made a plaster cast of a man, made a foam rubber mold then sprayed it with a plastic coating for the flesh-like appearance. Actually McMahan made five suits before he came up with one that was tight enough not to show any wrinkles. Each suit was made smaller until he found the correct size. The head for the android was designed by John Chambers, Oscar-Award winner for his creative makeup design on "Planet of the Apes."

Stunt double Studer wore the tight-fitting suit for hours on end preventing him from eating, drinking or making periodic trips for other functions. Finally, in an act of kindness, McMahan formed a hole in the mouth wide enough for a cigarette or a straw, small enough to be indistinguishable to the audience.

'THE SONG PAINTER'

Each show begins the same way. Mac Davis sits on a stool, strums his guitar, and sings "I believe in music, I believe in . . ."

He stops singing and playing, turns to the audience and asks, "What do we believe in?" And the audience shouts back, "LOVE!"

Mac smiles, the audience smiles back and the show is under way. Mac has every reason to smile. His song, "I Believe in Music," which he composed and wrote, has been recorded by more than 50 artists.

Now it sets the mood of his own eight-week summer TV series, "The Mac Davis Show," airing on NBC, Thursdays at 8PM. The show, rather than being a series of unrelated songs and sketches, tries to capture something of the Mac Davis life and style.

"Mac Davis is contemporary," said producer Bob Henry. "He's a pop artist. He is a poet who sets things to music. He is a storyteller when he talks and when he sings. We plan to emphasize not only his music but also his humor. The show including the guests, will be fashioned around his warm, good-natured, comedic personality. It will not be a variety show or a show with acts. It will reflect Mac Davis. It will be an intimate show." Many of the sketches, therefore, reflect aspects or incidents from Mac's own life.

Mac was born in Lubbock, Texas, where his father made him join the church choir at the age of 10. "I was a soprano, then, but no way would I sit with the women," said Mac. "I sat with the men in the bass section and sang their parts an octave up. I used to just love puttin' on that robe—made me feel real important."

Since then Mac has made his mark in the music field. He has recorded five albums and 13 singles, including the current, "One Hell of a Woman." His first self-recorded hit, "Baby Don't Get Hooked on Me," became the number one song in the country just a few weeks after its release and went on to become a gold record. It was named the most performed song of the year by Broadcast Music, Inc.

Some of his other songs which became popular included "Watching Scotty Grow," "In the Ghetto," "Something's Burning," "You're Good for Me," and "Within My Memory." His songs have been recorded by Elvis, Kenny Rogers and the First Edition, Andy Williams, Vikki Carr, Gallery, Ray Price, Jack Jones, Sammy Davis, Jr., Donny Hathaway, O.C. Smith, Bobby Goldsboro and Sinatra.

Davis has never had any formal musical training, just instinct for matching words to melodies. To this day he can't read music. His own compositions will figure in each one of his shows. But so will his humor and life experiences.

He will be joined by such guest stars as Carol Lawrence, Jerry Van Dyke, George Gobel, Nanette Fabray, Rodney Allen Rippy, Ricky Segall, Joan Rivers, the Lennon Sisters, Roy Clark, Rich Little, Loretta Swit, Andy Griffith, Stiller & Meara, and Ken Berry, among others. The show will try to capture Mac Davis, the way Mac has tried to capture something about life and love in his music.

"Mac don' write songs, he paints 'em," Glen Campbell once remarked. Viewers will have a chance now to spend a summer with Davis, the Song Painter.

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR CLARENCE KELLEY, director of the FBI

There seems to be a rash of kidnappings. Are there any legislative steps being taken to alleviate the problem?—Debra Mussari, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

● There have been several kidnappings for ransom in the last six months, and legislation presently in effect covers all those incidents. In the several months that have followed the kidnapping of Patricia Hearst, the FBI, in conjunction with local authorities, has been involved in investigations of eight major abductions and one conspiracy to kidnap. All of the victims have been released. More than two dozen suspects involved have been arrested. More than $1 million in ransom money has been recovered. In the ninth case, a planned kidnapping was thwarted. But it's the Hearst case, of course, that has grabbed all the headlines.

FOR PETER FALK, TV's "Columbo"

Do you have any plans to do a weekly series?—M. M., Harrington Park, N.J.

● I'll never go on TV on a weekly basis unless I can't work anywhere else. I'm no dummy. If I'm in the gutter, I'll take a weekly series—but only if I'm in the gutter.

FOR CLAUDETTE COLBERT

I've often wondered at what point in your life you decided to cut your hair in the bangs that have become your trademark.—L. D., Indio, Calif.

● I came to California in 1932 to do "The Sign of the Cross" for Cecil B. DeMille and I had to wear a wig that looked very much as my hair does now. A friend thought the wig was very becoming and so did I, so I decided to use the style on my own hair as well. Also, if I wear my hair differently, my face suddenly looks very serious.

FOR JULIA CHILD, "The French Chef"

When the question, "Why do men make better chefs?" comes up, you and other experts talk about the physical strength required for the work. Are there other reasons why people think men are better cooks?—Karen Bowers, Morgantown, W. Va.

● Yes, I think so. Men are often less fussy than women and seem to be more inventive and daring. But perhaps the new liberated woman will beat them out. We'll have to wait and see.

FOR RONALD REAGAN, governor of California

Are you for or against legalized gambling and a state lottery in California?—Ronald Taylor, Eureka, Calif.

● I have always opposed the expansion of legalized gambling as a means of producing revenue because of the very real threat of encouraging and perpetuating organized crime. In addition, I feel we should not take advantage of those aspects of man's nature that tend to degrade him. In past years, the people of California, through the ballot, have expressed their disapproval of a state lottery.

FOR GENE RODDENBERRY, creator of "Star Trek"

Why is the new "Star Trek" done in cartoon form when so many members of the original cast are involved?—R. A., Chicago, Ill.

● Because the cast can come in once a month and tape four shows at a time. If we were doing a live show, we would be tying up their time for nine months out of the year.

FOR EILEEN FORD of the Ford Model Agency

Is Europe still a good hunting ground for New York modeling agencies?—J. F., Niagara Falls, Ont.

● It isn't what it used to be. There are lots of beautiful girls there, but the lure of New York isn't what it was. They'd rather make less money and live in Paris!

FOR ISAAC HAYES, composer-performer, actor

Has religion played an important part in your music?—L. O., East St. Louis, Ill.

● Religion has influenced me, as it has most black entertainers, but I don't go to church often. Not that I am not a Christian. I just feel you can keep the Commandments when you are on your own, in your own house, and in your own way of life.

FOR JOAN BLONDELL

So many actresses simply fade from the Hollywood scene, but you're still going strong. How do you account for this? —Casey Wyansmith, Washington, D.C.

● I made up my mind at least a dozen years ago that I'd had it with the pretty stuff and was going to be a character actress. I went from being a glamour gal to whatever acting part I could get. I believe as the English do: Take small roles, starring guest shots, anything—but keep working.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

I'm curious as to what has become of the first Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller.—J. McL., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

● Mary Todhunter Clark, the first Mrs. Rockefeller, is living quietly in New York City. She shuns publicity and any kind of limelight, but in April she visited her good friend, the wife of Gov. Malcolm Wilson (Rockefeller's successor), at the executive mansion in Albany, N.Y. This was her first visit to her former home since her divorce. She made the journey, unescorted and unrecognized, on a Penn Central train. But, as in the old days, she rode in the governor's car from the station to the mansion.

Let's Explode the Myth:

You Can't Escape Crime by Moving to the Country!

By Sloan Wilson
Especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

Sloan Wilson says:

"The idea that crime is a disease peculiar to the cities does not contribute anything to the understanding of it. It's time that all of us realized that there is no place we can run, no place where we can hide. Crime is something that both country and city people have to find new ways to prevent in their own backyards."

Elizabeth Gee

Sloan Wilson is the author of "The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit," "A Summer Place," and other novels.

"In the country almost every man has firearms, and there are many places where they can be used without being seen or heard by witnesses."

"There may not be many murders on the books, but every fall there are a lot of people shot in the woods . . . often at surprisingly short range."

When city people go to the country on vacation, they often think that they are leaving the world of crime behind. Because I live in the foothills of the Adirondacks, friends in New York congratulate me for having "escaped the violence" that scares them so much.

I still love living up here in the mountains, but after three years of it, I have stopped believing that the country is always as peaceful as Lake George seems on a quiet starlit night. On paper we don't have much serious crime—and the same can be said for rural regions in the South and the West—but even in the old days of the wild frontier, towns with big cemeteries often had few crimes on the books.

Last summer the illusion of eternal peace was rudely shattered in the Adirondacks when someone stabbed two men to death in the woods and abducted a girl who was later found dead in an abandoned mine shaft. There was a massive manhunt, complete with helicopters and roadblocks—and many people who had taken to the hills to find peace went back to the city in disgust. Finally a man who came from this region was wounded by a conservation officer with a gun and charged with one of the murders. At this writing his case has not been decided by the courts, but the news of his capture calmed a lot of frantic people. Some of the area's boosters have trotted out police records to convince tourists that the murders were only a freakish fluke, and our community is usually as trouble-free as the Garden of Eden before Eve ate that apple. I doubt that this is true.

The Adirondacks, like city slums, contain many desperately poor people. Essex County, where I live, has an unemployment rate that ranges above 25 percent in the winter. The rural poor have many advantages that the city poor lack, but they also have many disadvantages. A poor man in the country can fish and hunt, but his hut or trailer can be terribly isolated in the winter. In the mountains there is little opportunity for conviviality, for entertainment or for meeting new people. During the long, cold winters it is easy for a man to brood about personal wrongs he believes have been done him.

It would not be fair to say that murder is "common" around here, for many of the small mountain villages go for decades without a murder on their books. I'll put it this way: If I wanted to kill someone, I think it would be much easier to get away with it in the country than in the city. In the country almost every man has firearms, and there are many places where they can be used without being seen or heard by witnesses. There may not be many murders on the books, but every fall there are a lot of people shot in the woods. Almost always these killings are written off as accidents or suicides. Murder, after all, is a very difficult crime to prove in the forest. These accidents often involve natives who have been schooled in the use of rifles since early childhood, and they often take place at surprisingly short range. You can draw one of two conclusions: Either country folk cannot learn to handle guns safely, despite their pride in their marksmanship, or some of these killings are not quite accidental.

Country cops cannot be blamed for their reluctance to charge murder. Once they say a man has been murdered, they are under great pressure to catch a murderer. There are only a few state policemen and village cops, and they have thousands of miles of wilderness to patrol. They lack sophisticated equipment, and they have so little money for fancy sleuthing that they hesitate to take fingerprints, because that's an expensive process. Furthermore, the police cannot always be assured of the support of everyone when they charge murder. Psychotic killers are of course hunted down as avidly as they are in the city, but if a man kills to right some deep personal wrong, his neighbors may not rush to report him. A lot of folk still believe in the unwritten law up here. The tradition of working out one's own rough forms of justice without appeal to outside authority is still strong.

"Thefts are more rare in the country. . . . Vandalism, however, is common."

The suspicion that murder is more common in the country than the record books show will not come as news to anyone bred in a rural area. Country folk still feel safer in the mountains than they do in the city because murder in the city is such a terrifyingly random affair. A lot of city crime is a collision between strangers. Except when the tourists come, almost everyone knows everyone else in the country. If you don't do something to infuriate your neighbors, you will be fairly safe.

One reason why there are so few cases of recorded rape in the country is that the rapist cannot simply melt into the crowd and disappear. However, a worse kind of sexual crime is all too prevelant in rural areas: incest. Long a subject for crude humor, this crime, which is so pathetic when it involves minors, is all too common in any isolated region, as social workers and physicians can testify.

Thefts are more rare in the country than they are in the city, if only because there are few homes or business establishments that offer much to steal. Vandalism, however, is common. The target is often summer cottages that stand empty all winter. Windows are smashed, doors are pried open and furniture is overturned in an explosion of rage that rarely can be explained. The blame is often put on youngsters, but the culprits are almost never caught. My own family's summer home on Lake George and those of many of my friends have suffered this kind of damage during the past two winters.

I do not think that the existence of country crime gives any reason for denigrating country people, for the majority of rural folk are of course as innocent as the majority of city dwellers. But I think the dark side of country life is worthy of study.

Desi Arnaz Looks Back: "My Children Prove Even a Broken Marriage Can Be Worth It!"

"Desi never hangs up without saying, 'I love you, Dad.' In print it may look coy, but he doesn't say it for effect. He's always done it, even if we talk just a minute."

Desi Arnaz, Sr., looked amazingly trim and was in the best of spirits when we recently broke bread together. After 14 years away from show business, he's back at work on the Universal lot. Ironically, his ex-wife Lucy—mother of his two children, Lucie, 23, and Desi Jr., 21—had just decided to give up the TV grind in favor of movies and a few specials.

FAMILY WEEKLY: What made you decide to go back to work?

DESI: MCA-Universal boss Lew Wasserman called me and said I should quit sitting around and come develop one property at a time and let him handle all the administrative details, which I hate. Lew was my first agent, you know.

Lucie

Desi Jr.

Pictorial Parade

Desi and wife Edie: "Twenty-five years later, I married her."

To show you how low he was on the totem pole then, he used to pick me up and drive me to work—and I was getting practically no salary! Now he's a big wheel.

FW: Aren't you afraid you'll get too involved again?

DESI: No. I did that before, and once was enough. At one time I was president of a studio, starring in my own series, and was responsible for 20 other shows. I had 35 sound stages and 3,000 people to take care of. If I quit, they were out of work. It became a monster. That's why I wanted out. But now I'll have nothing to do with administration. If I want something I just pick up the phone. It's a pleasure. Someone else can do all that other stuff.

FW: Had you always wanted to be involved in show business?

DESI: No. No one in my family had ever been near it. I was finishing high school and was all set to go to Notre Dame to study law. I was going to be a criminal lawyer. Come to think of it, maybe there was a little bit of ham in me I didn't know about.

FW: Why didn't you go into law?

DESI: The revolution is what happened. My dad was mayor of my hometown in Cuba for ten years. My uncle was the chief of police. They had that town pretty well wrapped up for a while. Then Dad was elected to Congress. He still kept a hand in farming, raised cattle, slaughtered them and sold meat. All of a sudden, within 48 hours, everything was lost. My father's brother was killed, my dad was thrown in jail and our house was ransacked.

FW: What did you do?

DESI: Everything was chaos for about two months. I finally got to Key West, Fla., in '34, with just what I had on. And I found out something interesting about life: After all the big shots who'd been up to dinner, the only person to help me was my dad's secretary, who loaned me $110 to get out.

FW: How do you feel about both of your children going into show business?

DESI: I'm glad they like it. Their mother gave them good training, having them in her show. It was worth six years of college to be with Big Mama.

FW: Did you anticipate that your children would want to be actors?

DESI: Lucie surprised me. She was the introvert of the family. Whenever we had anyone over, and I'd introduce the kids, Desi was like Al Jolson, taking bows all over the place. Lucie would get mad if I introduced her. But when she went to Marymount, she was in a couple of plays and everything changed. She's one heck of a dancer, and can sing well, too.

FW: Are you sorry you had to raise your children in the limelight?

DESI: No — I'm amazed how they've turned out. I don't know how we could do better. If they'd turned out badly, all kinds of psychiatrists could tell me what I'd done wrong, but the kids double-crossed everyone. They're just great.

FW: Are you close to your children?

DESI: I see them continually and we talk on the phone almost daily. In fact, I consider Desi my best friend. He does something nice that means a lot to me. He never hangs up without saying, "I love you, Dad." In print it may look coy, but he doesn't say it for effect. He's always done it, even if we talk just a minute.

FW: Did you run into any snag about who would have the children when you and Lucy divorced?

DESI: I think we managed to handle that well, if I do say so myself. We didn't set any rules like they had to be with me every other Saturday, or stuff like that. We left it up to them. If I was at my place in Del Mar and they wanted to go to the beach, they'd come stay with me. And so on. I think it's a terrible thing to make them go one week here, one week there.

FW: Have you and Lucy managed to stay friends?

FW: Do you think Lucie's marriage to Phil Vandervoort would have had more chance if she'd been older?

DESI: That's a hard one to answer. She was 20 or 21 when she married and I don't know if you can arrange the timing. How do you manage falling in love? It just happens.

FW: Was Desi hurt when his romance with Liza Minnelli ended so abruptly?

DESI: I am sure of it.

FW: Does he have a temper?

DESI: Desi is such a gentleman. When the kids were little, Lucie used to push him around a bit and he'd take it. He had a wonderful disposition. Better than mine, thank God. But when he gets mad, watch out. He takes quite a while, then finally he says, "Don't do that again." And that's it.

FW: Is your wife Edie an actress?

DESI: No. When I first came out here in 1940 she was a cigarette girl at Santa Anita. She was a horse-aholic even then. Just like me. She was about 20. I thought I was a pretty good-looking character then, and never had any trouble with girls, but nothing worked with her. And I tried every angle. Twenty-five years later, I married her. I guess the moral is "Never give up."

FW: Where do you live?

DESI: We are up to our fins in places. I've a little house in Beverly Hills that my mother occupies. My father just passed away last year. I've a ranch in Corona that I want to convert into a kind of posada (in Spanish, an inn). Then the place in Del Mar, and my home in Las Cruces in Baja that I designed and built myself.

FW: What do you consider your biggest mistake?

DESI: That's tough — I've made so many. Probably buying RKO studios. It wasn't a mistake commercially, but it was personally. It made me into something I didn't want to be: a business tycoon.

FW: If you could do everything over again, what would you do differently?

DESI: I'd try not to grow so big. But, unfortunately, that's the name of the ball game in this country. I would have much preferred staying with a few quality shows I liked. But, just to keep people employed, I had to do others, and then I had to compromise, and that's terrible. There's only one way to do things, and that's the right way.

FW: Looking back, what do you think was the "rightest" thing you did?

DESI: I don't like to keep bragging, but my kids are wonderful. There's a lot to be said even for a marriage that didn't work because we did a couple of good things—two good kids. Lucy and I gave a party for Desi Jr. on his 21st birthday —even invited Gary, for heaven's sake [Lucille Ball's husband, Gary Morton] —and at the end of the evening, I looked across the room at our two kids and I said to Lucy, "Honey, if we never did anything else, we have those two wonderful people sitting over there."

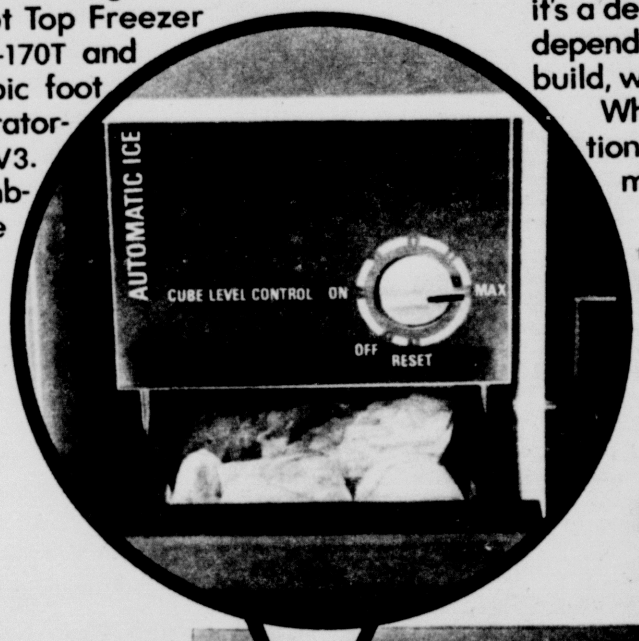
Frigidaire has made it possible for its dealers to offer you an automatic ice maker absolutely free when you buy any one of our three most popular refrigerator-freezers:

Our 17 or 20.6 cubic foot Top Freezer Refrigerators, models FPCI-170T and FPCI-206T. Or our 20.3 cubic foot Side-by-Side 3-door Refrigerator-Freezer, model FPCI-203 V3. (You pay only for the plumbing and installation of the ice maker.)

It means you won't have to fill ice trays at the kitchen sink. And you won't have to worry about spills on the way to the refrigerator.



It also means you can always have a bucket of ice on hand for those unexpected occasions. It's all done for you automatically, right inside our 100% Frost Proof refrigerator-freezer. And it's a dependable ice maker, too, because we've been building dependable refrigerators for over 50 years—and whatever we build, we build to last.

What's more, we've used our exclusive Frigi-Foam insulation to make our walls as thin as possible to give you as much storage space—in as little space—as possible.

In fact, since it expires July 31, 1974, we suggest you see any participating Frigidaire dealer as soon as possible.

A Mexican Chili Soup and Hot Stuffed Hero Rolls

MARILYN'S MENU

Mexican Warmer*
Harborside Stuffed Hero Rolls*
Sweet 'n' Simple Coleslaw*
Watermelon Wedges
Soft Drinks Beer Milk

*Recipe given

Harborside Heroes—crisp, crusty rolls overflowing with a hot, cheesy filling—will go a long way to satisfy hearty, man-sized appetites.

MEXICAN WARMER

1 can (11¼ ozs.) chili-beef soup
1 soup can water
1 can (8 ozs.) whole kernel corn, drained and chopped
½ cup sliced, pitted black olives, optional
⅛ teaspoon ground cumin seed or chili powder
3 drops hot-pepper sauce

1. In 2-qt. saucepan, combine soup and water smoothly. Add remaining ingredients, heat to boiling. Reduce heat; simmer 5 minutes, uncovered.
2. Serve in mugs.

Makes about 3½ cups, 4 servings

HARBORSIDE STUFFED HERO ROLLS

3 pkgs. (10-oz. size) brown-and-serve French or hero rolls
2 cans (4½-oz. size) deviled ham or 2 cups chopped bologna or ham
1 pkg. (8 ozs.) process Cheddar cheese slices, chopped
1 cup finely chopped celery
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup chopped dill pickle or pickle relish
½ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon prepared mustard

1. Cut rolls lengthwise into 2 halves with a sharp knife. Using a fork scoop out inner roll, leaving a shell about ½-inch thick.
2. Crumble soft inner-roll pieces into a bowl. Stir in remaining ingredients. Heap ½ cup mixture into each half roll and place the 2 halves together.
3. Preheat oven to 350°F. Place rolls on a cookie sheet and bake for 35-40 minutes, or until golden brown and hot. Or wrap each roll in foil and place on barbecue grill about 4 inches from medium-hot coals. Grill 25-30 minutes, turning once or twice.

Makes 6 servings

SWEET 'N' SIMPLE COLESLAW

1 large head cabbage, slivered, 2½ qts.
2 cups green-pepper rings
2 cups Spanish onion rings
¾ cup sugar, plus 1 tablespoon
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup white vinegar
¾ cup vegetable oil

1. In large 3-qt. bowl layer cabbage, green pepper and onion; sprinkle ¾ cup sugar over all.
2. In saucepan combine remaining 1 tablespoon sugar and remaining ingredients; mix well. Heat to boiling, stirring; pour over slaw. Cover with plastic film or foil and refrigerate at least 4 hours.
3. Just before serving, toss salad thoroughly.

Makes 2½ qts., 8 servings

Here's How You Can Sponsor A Child

Here's What You Do

- Fill out your name and address on the coupon.
- Indicate your preference of boy or girl, and country.

Or . . .

- Check the box marked "Choose any child who needs my help," allowing us to assign you a child from our emergency list.
- Enclose your first monthly check. The cost is only $15 each month to help a child who needs you.

Here's What You Will Receive

- In about two weeks you'll receive a Personal Sponsor Folder with photograph and information on the child you sponsor and a description of the project where the child receives help.
- Later on . . . a "welcome letter" from the overseas field office.
- Progress reports on the child when you request them.
- A Christmas greeting from the child.
- The opportunity to write directly to the child. You will be given the mailing address and detailed instructions on mail to your child's country.
- Letters from the child answering your correspondence. You receive the child's original letter and an English translation from an overseas office.
- And the satisfaction that comes from helping a deserving child.

Here's What Your Sponsored Child Receives

- In children's homes: supplementary food, clothing, medical care, and dedicated housemothers.
- In Family Helper Projects: school supplies and clothing, medical assistance, emergency food and shelter, and family guidance from a trained child care worker.
- Special aid depending on the country and the type of project.
- Psychological support because the child knows you care.

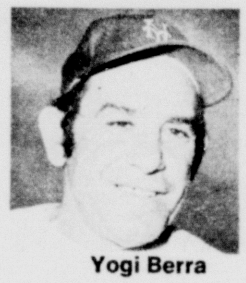
Bobby Bragan: "Here's My All-Time, All-Star Batting Lineup"

Bobby Bragan

Willie Mays

Joe DiMaggio



Yogi Berra

Sandy Koufax

FORT WORTH, TEXAS

Dear Sirs:

I feel compelled to write you concerning your article, "The World's Toughest Batting Orders—As Selected by Ten Star Major League Pitchers," which appeared in the March 31 FAMILY WEEKLY. I think it is a shame when unproven players such as Dave Concepcion of Cincinnati are placed in a lineup of "toughest outs." I agree that Hank Aaron, Billy Williams, Rod Carew and Willie Stargell are among the greatest hitters the game has ever known, but it certainly did not take your panel long to forget Roberto Clemente.

Please do not interpret this as a misunderstanding of the purpose of your article. I understand that it was a survey of contemporary pitchers versus the hitters they must face each day. But I thought it would be fun to compare these lineups to those of days gone by. Why not take a look at some of these names in an all-time lineup?

Batting order:

1. Willie Mays, cf: .300 lifetime hitter . . . over 600 home runs and over 300 stolen bases . . . probably the greatest outfielder ever.

2. Ty Cobb, lf: .367 lifetime avg . . . 4,192 career hits . . . 890 stolen bases . . . 2,245 runs . . . 3,034 games.

3. Babe Ruth, dh: .342 lifetime avg . . . 714 home runs . . . 2,216 RBI . . . 690 slugging average . . . the most prolific hitter of his time.

4. Rogers Hornsby, 2b: .358 lifetime hitter . . . 302 career homers . . . two-time triple-crown winner . . . the greatest right-handed hitter ever.

5. Joe DiMaggio, rf: .325 lifetime avg . . . 361 career homers . . . 579 career slugger ranks in Top Ten in eight different World Series categories.

6. Pie Traynor, 3b: .320 lifetime . . . hit right at .300 for 12 straight years . . . probably the finest fielding third-sacker ever.

7. Honus Wagner, ss: .327 lifetime . . . 722 stolen bases . . . 3,415 hits . . . seven-time batting champ . . . five-time RBI champ . . . all-time great fielder.

8. George Sisler, 1b: .340 lifetime . . . 375 stolen bases . . . two-time batting champ with averages of .407 and .420 . . . slick fielder.

9. Yogi Berra, c: .285 lifetime . . . 358 homers . . . 1,700 games behind the plate . . . leader in three World Series categories . . . second in three others.

LHP: Sandy Koufax . . . 655 lifetime . . . winner ERA champ for his last five seasons . . . four-time strikeout champ . . . ninth lifetime KO man . . . only man ever to throw four no-hit games . . . including one perfecto.

RHP: Walter Johnson . . . 413 career wins . . . 110 shutouts . . . 3,499 career strikeouts . . . 2.17 career ERA . . . nearly 6,000 innings pitched . . . 532 completions.

You may have noticed that the name of Henry Aaron was left out of the listing. Having been fortunate enough to manage Henry for four seasons, I can personally attest to the fact that he is one of the greatest players who have ever lived—both in his play on the field and in his behavior off it. Unfortunately, his all-around play is not quite as spectacular as that of a Mays and his home-run feats are not as prolific as those of Ruth. This is not to say that Aaron does not deserve the homer record, because he does. However, the home-run feats of the Babe were indeed amazing. Many years, the Babe would outhit entire teams! So the fact is that Ruth was a god among his contemporaries, whereas Aaron was outhit many times by other players in the league. Nonetheless, I would list Hank Aaron as my No. 1 reserve on this team.

I just thought your article was thought-provoking and that a comment was appropriate. Thank you very much.

Bobby Bragan's letter—and his lineup—are interesting, all right. FAMILY WEEKLY's batting order was compiled by Sports Editor Larry Bortstein after he talked with pitchers active in the major leagues today. They were asked to name active players only, which explains the absence of Roberto Clemente, and the whole Bragan batting order. Bobby Bragan, incidentally, formerly played as infielder and catcher for the Philadelphia Phillies and the Brooklyn Dodgers. He was manager at Pittsburgh, Milwaukee and Atlanta before becoming president of the Texas League, his present position.

Human Medicine Is Bad Medicine for Pets!

If your pet pup has a stomachache or your cat has the sniffles, don't reach into your medicine cabinet for a pill or a potion. They will probably either be useless or lethal.

One should never administer most human-type laxatives to pets, with the possible exception of milk of magnesia. Many laxatives contain small amounts of strychnine—poisonous to Bowser and Tabby. Aspirin is another potential killer for cats, though permissible for dogs. Although some cats have had baby aspirin on the advice of a veterinarian, better not experiment with this drug yourself—it has proved disastrous too many times. Cold remedies of any kind should be avoided. Tranquilizers should only be administered with a veterinarian's prescription. Ditto antibiotics. In fact, let your vet decide on all medications and you'll be safer. —By Felicia Ames

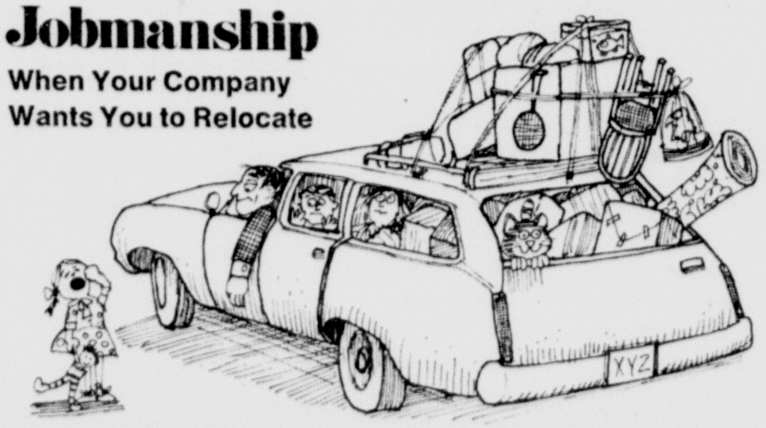
Jobmanship

When Your Company Wants You to Relocate



The growing resistance of American employees to relocation has forced many corporations to change their moving policies. In the 1950's and '60's, an executive often had to relocate 11-14 times before reaching his final niche. Nowadays, to reach the same niche, an employee may only have to move five-six times. Atlas Van Lines' sixth annual nationwide survey of corporation relocation policies and plans discovered the dramatic drop in corporations' expectations. In 1969-70 the companies surveyed expected a whopping 66.7 percent of their salaried people to pack up and change towns at least once every three years. By 1972 employee attitudes reduced this to only 36.9 percent. Now, in 1974, it's down to 28.5 percent moving in three-year intervals and an impressive 45 percent of salaried personnel not moving at all in a five-year period. Also, fringe benefits for moving have increased. Eighty-six percent of companies now grant company-paid moving of unlimited weight of household goods. Fifty-eight percent will pay for the move of a second auto. Forty-three percent will pay for a boat. Seventeen percent even toss in maid service to clean your old home when you leave and/or prepare your new home for your arrival. —By S. R. Redford

Collectors and Investors Note: When Edition Limits Are Reached, No More Will Ever Be Produced!

SINCE ancient days, man has revered magnificent works of art in fine porcelain. Cleopatra, the Emperors of Rome and the Caliphs of Bagdad showered rewards on their skilled ceramic artisans. Now you too can own the prized possessions of Kings and Queens – the finest collectible porcelains.

Every lovely plate on this page is perfect to start your own personal collection. Each is a true Limited Edition plate you will certainly take great pride in displaying in your home. Each represents an excellent value and each, in our opinion, could substantially increase in value due to the growing popularity and demand for this centuries-old art form.

KNOWING WHAT TO BUY IS ALL IMPORTANT!

Take as an example, the Bing & Grondahl collection: its first Annual plate was produced in 1895 and sold for 50¢; it is currently worth $2,700. Knowing what to buy IS all important! Shown in this ad is the latest in this fabulous B&G series, the 1974 Annual, which we offer to you for only $22.00, a "must" buy for serious collectors.

Also shown are other magnificent plates, many just as rare as B&G, from many of the finest studios in Europe and America – including Goebel Hummel, Haviland-Parlon, Royal Copenhagen and Gorham—all available only while limited quantities last.

We feel we have been successful in helping our customers choose their collections. For instance: we sold for $30.00 the 1971 Goebel Hummel Annual that now brings up to $225.00 – we sold the 1969 Bing & Grondahl Mother's Day Plate for $9.00 – it now brings over $300.00. We intend to continue our successful record and we have chosen every limited edition plate on this page for its intrinsic beauty and value.

OUR SPECIAL OFFER

Look over the beautiful plates shown here and make your selections. Then, you can take advantage of our special $4.95 discount offer on the 1971 Santa Clara "Three Wise Men" plate. In addition, we will send to you a full year's subscription to our informative and highly regarded monthly newsletter – FREE OF CHARGE – But please do act now: quantities of these magnificent Limited Edition Collector Plates are limited and demand for them is great.

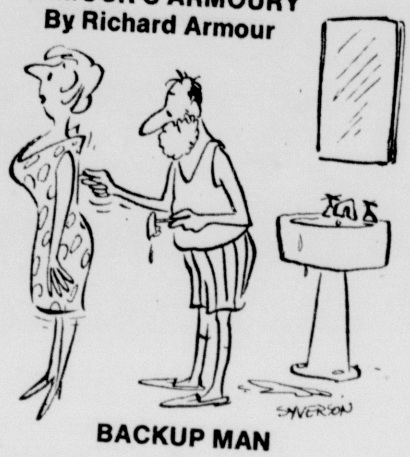
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour



BACKUP MAN

My wife has a dress I prefer,
Though it may not look nicest on her.
She has fancier gowns, more expensive;
Her wardrobe, you see, is extensive.
This dress, though, I cherish so much
Has a personal, heartwarming touch.
What's that? It's a zipper in back
That because of some muscular lack
She cannot zip up—must have aid.
It's the way that this dress-style was made.
So she calls me, with feminine yelp,
And I? Well, I'm happy to help.
I'm suddenly needed, her man—
Which I think was the dressmaker's plan.

Wife: "Dear, lets go out tonight and have a good time." Husband: "Good idea! If you get home first, leave the garage light on." —Anna Herbert

Nostalgia is like a grammar lesson. You find the present tense and the past perfect. —Robert Orben

With wigs so widely worn today,
A man can be upset.
That gal who seems a cute dumb

What in the World!

SWING JUMPER
Injury and death on the playground

QUOTE: "At first glance, jumping the fence doesn't appear to be the kind of thing that is learned. The first jump has to be successful. Ralph, the jumper [shown here], says that three or four years ago, the first time he tried it, he waited too long to leave the swing and flew over the fence, far enough out to miss a metal basketball backboard on the far side on his way down. In his fall he got caught on the basket rim and broke his shoulder. And his little brother—he was seven, and started jumping when he was six—used to jump fences at a different playground. There was no mesh fence there. It had been torn down, but the framework was still standing and the swing riders would jump to the top bar and hang on. His brother left the swing too late, struck the bar with his chest, flipped over, and down. He died two days later. After explaining this, Ralph walked back to the swing for a few more jumps before calling it a day." From "Hangin' Out: City Kids, City Games," by James Wagenvoord (J. B. Lippincott Co., $5.95). UNQUOTE.

How would you like the prospect of being attacked by bats? When Brad Dillman went to Mexico to make "Chosen Survivors," he was told he would have to be attacked by thousands of live bats because they wanted the effect to be "real." "Naturally I was apprehensive," recalls Dillman, "but I didn't get tetanus shots because I was told they'd make me sicker than if I got bitten." As it turned out, he didn't need to worry. There are two things bats are afraid of: light and people. And, of course, in making a film, those are the two essential ingredients. "They tried everything they could think of to get the bats to attack," says Dillman. "They shoved them down wind tunnels and blew them with huge fans, but they'd just swoop up to the ceiling and hang there. Finally they had to resort to faking the shots."

JACK LORD
Almost like being in love

Hawaii has its own "Gauguin," and the people who snap up his work in the Islands today are often astounded to learn that the signature is by the same Jack Lord who stars in "Hawaii Five-O." Jack's oils sell for as high as $6,000. His watercolors bring between $1,000 and $1,500, and his lithographs go for about $200. And they do sell. The Ala Moana Shopping Center Gallery sold $64,000 worth of his work in one year. The Margaret Keene Gallery sells an average of $35,000 worth a month. Lord says he'd rather be thought of as a painter than an actor. "To me, painting is like being in love for the first time. There is something very special about it." Jack is represented in 40 museums, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art has five of his works.

Those Horrid Age Spots

"I was so embarrassed, I served lunch with my gloves on."

"Then I found Esoterica. The medicated cream that works below the skin's surface, in the pigment-forming cells, to help lighten and fade age spots and other darkened skin discolorations on hands and face.

In a matter of weeks, my skin looked clearer."

Esoterica® Helps Fade Embarrassing Age Spots.

IMPOSSIBLE PRICE SHOES

EVEN THE NEW WHITES 2 pairs for 18.95

2 PAIRS for 18.95 with HABAND's TRIPLE PLUS

for LONG LIFE
– Longer than we dare promise out loud!

EXACT FIT

And Haband's 1974
– Never Need a Shine!

WHY PAY $15 to $30, Even for WHITES?

HABAND PRICE 2 pair 18.95

This year, WHITE SHOES are IMPERATIVE and a GOOD-LOOKS NATURAL TOO, for office wear as well as your weekend and vacation dress-up occasions. Only the prevailing high prices (or the pesky trouble of shopping for them) can spoil the fun now.

(Sure, most shoe stores will have a windowful of Whites out front, but try to get your size inside! It makes you wonder how they can even stay in business!)

Well, Haband Company of Paterson, NJ has been in business since 1925 selling excellent men's wear from coast to coast to men who require good quality and yet do not have the time to waste running around shopping. Now, with the gasoline crisis, we are doing even better business!

We sell excellent shoes in all the latest styles and our specialty is having all sizes in stock, ready to ship at once. For instance:

IS YOUR SIZE ON THIS CHART?

EEE			√	√	√	√	√	√	√	√	√	√	√	√

We carry all the styles shown on this page in all these sizes, READY TO SHIP! And we will be happy to send you ANY 2 pairs for only $18.95, ON APPROVAL, direct to your door. When the package arrives, you try them on, show the family, see how they fit, and compare the value with what you are used to spending.

Then if for any reason you feel they are not all you expected, you may return them for complete refund.

We have sold millions of pairs under this same guarantee and we invite your AT-HOME INSPECTION, ANY 2 Pairs for $18.95!

YOU WILL BE SHOCKED WHEN YOU SEE OUR SHOES!

These are not cheap shoes! They are the completely new 100% man-made shoes that look and feel like full grain leather but are lighter weight and perform even better!

They are fully lined, with full heel-to-toe cushion insole, cushion arch support, full built-in shank, and life-of-the-shoe PVC sole and heel! All detailing is excellent, with heavy metal buckles and trim, handsome wheeled sole edging, heavy elastic gores, full lifetime laces, THE WORKS!

*What's This Easy Care Factor?

Simply This: White Shoes have gained their tremendous popularity today because the new materials are so easy to clean! Just a quick wipe with a damp cloth restores their original spotless white, and they never need a shine! It's that simple, and what a pleasure at this spectacular low price!

WAIT NO MORE! The day of the overpriced Executive Shoe is over. Sooner or later you will be wearing these new price shoes. Why overspend one penny more on old-fashioned kinds? Start right now. Check your choice – we await your instructions!
